WHITE HOUSE STATEMENT OUTLINES TAX REVISION AIMS

Main Object Declared to Be Contemplated in the Program Is the Freeing of Business From Paralyzing and Exasperating Restrictions.

EQUAL DISTRIBUTION OF BURDEN IN VIEW

Denial Made That There Is Any Effort to Relieve the Rich, but Rather to Insure That No Class Be Left an Avenue of Escape.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 13.—An official statement explaining the administration tax revision program was issued today at the White House. It declares that "the aim was to establish methods that would raise the needed revenue within a reasonable certainty, make collections sure and time expensive and properly adjust the burden among all classes of the community."

"It is felt that highly important progress has been made along these lines," the statement says, adding:

"There has been no effort to relieve the rich of their share of burdens, but rather to insure that no class will be left an avenue of escape from these. A casual analysis of the proposals show that what may be described as 'the rich man's taxes' will produce about $1,800,000,000, while the balance will be distributed over the entire community, rich and poor.

Probable Effect of Lower Rates.

"The reduction to 32 per cent of the highest income and surtax brackets is expected by the experts to produce actually more revenue from these sources than do the present much higher rates. The present prevent transactions which would involve application of the high rates, and thus keep taxes away from the Government. Also, they drive money into tax-free securities, to the distress of business; and they lead to fraud and evasions.

"Experience has shown, in dealing with the excess profits taxes, that where there is periodic selling this tax is pyramided, multiplying the burden of the consumer, and inducing speculation and waste, which has been largely responsible for the intense speculation that followed the war. It is an unsatisfactory tax on which to base revenue estimates because its product of revenue is so extremely variable and in the present epoch of reduced earnings it would utterly fail to produce the amount needed.

"In increasing the tax on corporation earnings, an exemption is made on those having earnings of $2000 or less—the poor man's corporation. The number that would thus be exempted would exceed 300,000."

Contemplates Freeing Business.

After reviewing benefits which it is claimed will flow from repeal of the transportation taxes and substitution of manufacturers' taxes for the so-called "nuisance" levies, the statement concluded:

"The whole tax reform program contemplates freeing business from what have been found paralyzing and exasperating restrictions encouraging to the utmost, the resumption of enterprise and business, removing every possible incentive to evasion and fraud, and distributing the tax burden with the greatest possible equity among all classes of people, keeping in mind, the purpose to impose the larger share on those best able to pay."

Repeal of the express tax of 1 cent on every 20 cents of value was decided upon today by the Ways and Means Committee.

The committee also voted to levy a flat license tax of $10 on all retailers of soft drinks and to fix the manufacturers' tax on cereal beverages at 12 cents a gallon in place of the present manufacturers' tax of 15 per cent on the sale price.

Having practically completed revision of the levy sections of the 1918 law yesterday, majority members of the House Ways and Means Committee expected to finish work on the tax bill today so as to have a committee draft ready for consideration by the

KING ALBERT, NOT IN EVENING DRESS, BARRED FROM CASINO

Belgian Monarch Later Admitted When Presence Became Known to Management.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch.

DEAUVILLE, Aug. 13.—"You can't come in dressed like that," said a doorkeeper at the Casino Thursday night to a tall, fair haired man about to enter the baccarat room.

The visitor was King Albert of the Belgians. He wore a gray lounge suit, the only one he had taken on his flying trip—the popular monarch had just come over by airplane from Ostend and had strolled to the Casino.

It was after dinner and King Albert was informed that at that time evening dress was obligatory in the room. Looking quite disappointed, the King was turning away when someone passing recognized him and informed the Casino's management. The rule about evening dress was waived and King Albert was admitted, of course.

After watching the play a little while he tried his luck with a few hundred franc notes. He smiled as he saw them raked up by the croupier and pushed toward a winner. The King continued his little flutter for a few minutes, but finding his luck did not change he gave up playing and walked away.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Aug. 13.—In 27 years Andrew McKnight received 500 letters proposing marriage, but because he could not make up his mind which to accept, died a bachelor.

McKnight, kitchen helper in a local hotel, died Wednesday, and today the letters and a certificate showing he had subscribed to a matrimonial bureau were found in his trunk.

PEDDLER USES PHONOGRAPH

Instrument Announces "It's Here for You," for Ice Cream Vendor.

Mack Tate of 1225 Merchant street, negro ice cream vendor, doesn't see any use in wasting one's voice in this day of enlightenment, so when he goes out for the day's work he simply fills up ice cream cones and takes in the money while a phonograph carried on his push cart announces, "It's right here for you and if you don't get it 'taint no fault o' mine," with all the latest "jazz" variations.

Tate says his tunes, which include a number of "blues" never fail to attract an audience which responds readily to phonographic persuasion.

3 ARMED MEN ROB SALOON KEEPER OF $1500 ON STREET

Joseph Steiner Held Up Near Second and Arsenal After Drawing Money to Cash Pay Checks.

MEN LEAP FROM AUTO AND SEIZE VALISE

Victim Had Not Asked for Police Escort, Usually Furnished on Saturdays.

Three men with revolvers held up Joseph Steiner, a saloon keeper, of 3036 South Second street, at 9:30 a. m. today on Arsenal street, near Second street, and took from him a valise containing $1500 in cash. They escaped in an automobile.

Steiner a short time before had drawn the money from the South Side Trust Co., Broadway and Pestalozzi street, for use in cashing pay checks of employes of several factories in the neighborhood.

After the robbery Steiner told policemen he was returning to the saloon and was walking east on Arsenal street when an automobile drew up to the curb and three men jumped out.

The robbers ran up to him with revolvers leveled. Two kept him covered while the third jerked the valise from his hand. The engine of the automobile had been kept running. The three men jumped into it and drove away.

It had been Steiner's custom to carry payroll money from the bank to the saloon every Saturday. He usually asked for a police escort, but did not do so today, though he met and talked with two policemen at the entrance to the bank.

Reports He Was Attacked in Hallway and Robbed of $200.

John Welsh, 45 years old, 301 South Third street, reported to the police that at 11 a. m. today two white men pinioned him in the hallway at that address and robbed him of $200. One of them struck him in the nose and both ran down stairs and escaped.

DOWNTOWN CANDY SHOP MAKES GENERAL PRICE REDUCTIONS

Ice Cream Sodas and Sundaes Cut From 18 to 10 Cents—Candy Down 10 to 25 Cents a Pound.

Under the display caption, "The Hour Has Struck," one of the largest downtown candy shops is advertising substantial reductions in the prices of ice cream sodas, sundaes and candies.

All sodas and sundaes with syrup or fruits have been reduced to 10 cents and all nut sundaes to 15 cents. Sundae prices at this shop formerly ranged from 18 cents to 22 cents.

Chocolate candies formerly selling at 50 cents are now 40 cents a pound, other reductions on candies are from 70 cents to 60 cents, and from $1.50 to $1.25 a pound.

Inquiry yesterday showed that these reduced prices have not been met by other downtown candy stores, though several of the shops were offering "special Friday and Saturday reductions" on some grades of candies.

LLOYD AND DINGLE COMPROMISE ON CONDUCT OF CENTENNIAL

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

SEDALIA, Mo., Aug. 13.—Trouble between Lieutenant-Governor Hiram Lloyd, chairman of the Centennial Commission, and A. C. Dingle, president of the State Fair Board, over who is to run the Centennial and Fair next week, was compromised by an agreement that Lloyd next week is to be superintendent of admissions and Dingle and the fair board are to conduct the rest of the exhibitions.

The conference between Gov. Hyde and the belligerents preceded the settlement. Dingle had threatened to oust Lloyd and the centennial commission from the affair completely, and he and Lloyd had a spirited verbal exchange in front of the Administration building of the Centennial, Thursday night just before the pageant.

HALLIDAY CREDITORS AGREE TO A RECEIVER

They Are Informed at Meeting That Broker Is Trying to Get Money From Sister.

Persons who have invested a total of $78,000 with G. V. Halliday & Co., stock and bond brokers, in the Arcade Building, and have complained of the failure of George V. Halliday, head of the concern, to deliver securities which they purchased, today met in Room 515, Arcade building, and agreed to the appointment of Henry H. Furth, an attorney, as receiver in bankruptcy under the petition filed yesterday by three creditors. This action was taken at the suggesion of Morris G. Levinson, attorney for Halliday.

T. J. Hoolan, representing the creditors who yesterday filed the petition in bankruptcy against Halliday, today filed a petition for a receiver, the stipulation agreeing upon the appointment of Furth with a bond of $5000 and no bond for the petitioners. Hoolan said Halliday's counsel had waived all formalities, and that, in the absence of Judge Faris and Referee in Bankruptcy Coles, the case probably would go before Referee Alexander at Cape Girardeau.

Wife to Turn Over Property.

Levinson announced at the meeting that Halliday's wife would turn over equities she holds in property to the creditors and clients who have claims, and said Halliday was in Cincinnati today to borrow money from his sister. When he returns, Levinson explained, he hopes to have about $25,000 to pay at once and will give notes for the entire balance.

One young woman who attended the meeting said she and her sister had turned over $1300 they had saved since childhood to Halliday for a bond that was never delivered. She told newspaper men she had managed to retrieve $500 of the investment by "pestering the life out of Halliday in the past three months."

Eight Women at Meeting.

There were 46 persons at the meeting, eight of whom were women. Levinson opened the meeting with the statement that the situation could probably be handled to advantage notwithstanding the petition in bankruptcy. He said the firm had $800 cash in bank and that Mrs. Halliday had agreed to turn over Texas land, in which she had an equity of $8000 to $10,000; a $4000 equity in their home at Webster Groves, and that Halliday had a $10,000 equity in securities in local banks. Out of this, Levinson said, together with the efforts of Halliday with his relatives, it was hoped to raise $25,000 for the creditors at once.

Levinson added that the books show a deficit in Halliday's finances of $78,000, but may run higher, and he asked for indulgence by the creditors in the hope that a full adjustment would be made in time. He said a wealthy resident of St. Louis recently thought seriously of refinancing Halliday, and it was yet likely that this man would come to Halliday's aid.

RHINELAND ECONOMIC BARRIER TO BE LIFTED

Allies to Suspend It Sept. 15 if Germany Continues Payments.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Aug. 13.—The Allied Supreme Council today decided to abolish the economic barrier of the Rhineland on Sept. 15 if Germany continues to pay promptly her war indemnities, but decided to maintain the occupation of the right bank of the Rhine and the Ruhr until the next meeting of the council, when it was agreed that the matter should be reconsidered.

The Council concluded its sessions late this afternoon.

Uncle Sam Has a Full Liquor Cellar and Can't Empty It

Storage Space Is Needed and Spirits Are Regarded as Too Valuable to Pour Out.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 13.—An over-stocked national booze cellar that nobody knows how to empty is one of the unusual heritages of Uncle Sam under the prohibition law.

The anamalous story of how, in a land of drouth, liquor obtained by confiscation has become a white elephant on the hands of the Government, was told to the Cabinet yesterday by Attorney-General Daugherty, arousing a discussion which ed nowhere except to a decision to investigate further.

The Attorney-General told his colleagues and the President that large sums of much needed Government funds were being eaten up in storage house rentals and policing expenses to keep liquor that the Government did not want. An even greater economic waste would result from pouring the seized spirits into the sewer, and it was suggested that a way might be found to extract the alcohol for commercial purposes or to turn the liquor itself to some legitimate use. The law says it is to be "confiscated," but does not say how to dispose of it.

Another prohibition enforcement question that interested the Cabinet yesterday arose from the seizure of liquor not intended for consumption in the United States, but merely in transit in bond through this country. Cabinet members asked whether there was not some way to secure release of such shipments, but were told that nothing could be done until the courts had ruled on several cases of seizure now pending. Should the seizures be held legal, it is not impossible that the Attorney-General may ask Congress to change the law.

DE VALERA URGED TO DISREGARD ULSTER AND WORK ON CONSTITUTION

FOUR ADDITIONAL WARRANTS ISSUED IN RICHTER CASE

Assistant Circuit Attorney Acts on Hearing More Complaints About Manager of Midwest Exchange.

Further evidence of the confidence which various persons placed in the bonds of the Midwest Business Exchange was unearthed yesterday by Assistant Circuit Attorney Garstang, who, in his investigation of the concern, has not yet been able to turn up any assets that the "Exchange" possessed, save the meager office furniture at 1809 Olive street, and the services of Herman Richter, the manager, and his wife, Alice.

Notwithstanding this, several persons have come forward to tell of trading farm land, town lots and other valuable property for the bonds. The principal and only business of the "Exchange," so far as the Circuit Attorney's office has been able to disclose, was the exchange, by Richter, of worthless bonds for real estate, Garstang said.

After hearing the complaints of several persons who had had dealings with Richter, Garstang yesterday issued four additional warrants against Richter, one for false pretenses, one for embezzlement, and two for forgery in the third degree. Richter, who is 69 years old, lives at 1600 Mississippi avenue.

Doctor Makes Accusation.

Among the various accusations that came to light yesterday was one that Richter fleeced the president of his board of trustees out of $200 by giving him a bad check. The president, Dr. George H. Rice, of 3507 Page avenue, described how he came to hold that office in the concern, and also how he happened to cash Richter's check.

He said he met Richter last November when the latter advertised to trade bonds for realty. No such deal took place between them, but out of their acquaintance came a proposal by Richter that Dr. Rice become president of the board of trustees of the Exchange. As a little inducement, Richter offered Dr. Rice $1000 in bonds and 20 shares of stock in the Exchange. Dr. Rice accepted.

Some time later the manager, Richter, remarked to the president, Dr. Rice, that the manager was a little short of ready cash, and suggested that, as a courtesy between officers of the concern, the president and the manager exchange checks for $200; the president to hold the manager's check for two weeks. The president said that, as between business associates, he would do it.

Finds Check Is Worthless.

When the time came to put in Richter's check, Dr. Rice found that Richter had no money in the bank and he still has the check. He still has the stock and bonds, too.

This, Dr. Rice said, constituted the sum of his duties as president of the board of trustees. He was told that Richter had served a term in the Missouri penitentiary for forgery, and one in Iowa for embezzlement.

The two forgery warrants were based on the fact that the bonds of the exchange bear the name of Bohumil Kosek, a druggist, at 1800 South Twelfth street, who said he did not authorize any such use of his name, and did not know it was being so used.

Tries to Buy Theater.

It was learned yesterday that in April Jay Chappell, acting as agent for Frank Kopejtko, owner of the Gem Theater Building, 14-16 South Sixth street, entered into a contract with Richter to sell Richter the building at a purchase price of $75,000. Of this amount, $5000 was to be cash, $40,000 in the bonds of the Midwest Business Exchange, and the remainder on time.

Richter posted a forfeit of $1000 in bonds—to carry out the deal.

Communication on Aug. 4, Before South African Premier's Departure for Home, Said Further Efforts for Settlement at That Time Were Useless.

"NO SOLUTION OF PROBLEM BY FORCE"

Reply of Irish Republican Leader Sent to Lloyd George at Paris Taken Up at Meeting of British Cabinet.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Aug. 13.—Official confirmation of reports that the British Government had offered Ireland a dominion status was given late today when a letter was made public at Premier Lloyd George's official residence, written by Gen. Smuts, South African Premier to Eamonn de Valera, on Aug. 4, just before Gen. Smuts left for South Africa.

"The British Prime Minister," wrote General Smuts in the course of his long letter, "offers a complete dominion status to the 26 counties, subject to certain strategic safeguards which you are asked to agree to voluntarily as a free dominion. * * It is far more than was offered the Transvaal and the free state."

Difficulties of Settlement.

General Smuts in the letter asserted he had been desirous of helping along an Irish settlement, but there existed an impasse which he did not know at the time how to get over. This, he said, was that both Sir James Craig, the Ulster Premier, and De Valera were equally immovable in their positions, the former maintaining that Ulster would not consent to a change from her present status and the Republican leader insisting that Ulster come under a united Ireland Constitution.

"Force as a solution of the problem," continued General Smuts, "is out of the question both on your (De Valera's) and his (Craig's) premises. The process of arriving at an agreement will, therefore, take time."

General Smuts urged De Valera to leave Ulster alone at present and concentrate on a free Constitution for the remaining 26 counties of Ireland, "and through the successful running of the Irish state, and the pull of economic and peaceful forces eventually bring Ulster into that state."

"As I said before," reiterated General Smuts, "I don't consider one single, clean cut solution of the Irish question possible at present."

The presence at today's British Cabinet meeting of General Macready, military commander of Ireland, and General H. M. Tudor, commander of the auxiliary police in Ireland, as well as Lord Fitzalan, Governor-General of Ireland, suggests that De Valera's letter to Premier Lloyd George raised the question of the release of at least some interned Sinn Fein leaders if not general amnesty.

McKeown's Release.

Since John J. McKeown, who had been convicted of murder, was allowed his freedom last week, many Irish leaders have been asking: "If one, why not all?"

The Westminster Gazette, a staunch home rule organ, warns De Valera this afternoon that "there is in Downing street a strong party" anxious to find anything in his writings "which would enable them to say that he has refused the Government offer."

That De Valera's message was a rejection of the Government's terms was frankly discredited in official circles today, and the impression was given that the hurried calling of the Cabinet was due largely to the Premier's desire to reply to De Valera before the meeting of the Irish Republican Parliament next Tuesday.

LEAGUE LIKELY TO MEET AUG. 20 TO DISCUSS SILESIA

Viscount Ishii Is Expected to Summon Council, Although Paris Press Expresses Much Disapproval.

BRIAND MAY ACCEPT MAJORITY VERDICT

Premier Said to Have Waived Rule Which Requires That Decisions Must Be Unanimous.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Aug. 13.—Viscount Ishii, president of the Council of the League of Nations, is understood to have decided to summon that body to meet on Aug. 20, to consider a solution of the upper Silesian problem. Estimates of how long it may take the Council to arrive at a decision vary widely, running from a few days to several months.

Discussing the situation with the Echo de Paris, last night, Louis Loucheur, Minister for Liberated Regions in the French Cabinet, remarked that "things go quicker than you think." He added he had absolute confidence in the ability of the Council to arbitrate the vexing question.

His confidence, however, was not shared by Paris newspapers this morning, which called attention to the previous work of the Council relative to Danzig, Vilna and the Aland Islands as evidences of the kind of speed and impartiality that might be expected.

Briand Waives a Rule.

In agreeing to submit the Silesian question to the Council of the league, Premier Briand is asserted to have waived the rule providing that decisions of the Council must be unanimous, and the impression is that he will accept the verdict of a majority of the Council.

Pertinax, political editor of the Echo de Paris, declares the French Premier made such an agreement. The idea of submitting the matter to the League of Nations, says l'Oeuvre, originated with M. Briand, who suggested it to Mr. Lloyd George when they met at the Italian Embassy last Tuesday. The British Premier rejected the plan, but revised it when he found France would not give way yesterday.

Emphatic dissatisfaction with the decision of the Supreme Council to call upon the League of Nations to settle the Silesian question was generally expressed by the press here today.

The students of Paris today entered into the Upper Silesian controversy. Residents of the city found on their way to work this morning that the city had been plastered with large posters issued by an association of students. These posters have a carefully prepared argument in support of the French position as opposed to that of Great Britain.

French Attitude.

Newspapers printed in the English and French languages based their contention that the French attitude was correct on the ground that if the partition of Silesia would cause to arise a spirit of revenge in Germany, it was too late to apply this theory. They declared that, since Danzig and other places had been taken away from Germany, the only thing remaining was to render Germany as impotent as possible.

Germans Fear Poles are Prepared for Another Invasion.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Aug. 13.—Information regarding the decision of the Supreme Allied Council to refer the Upper Silesian dispute to the League of Nations was confined to a brief bulletin received here late yesterday afternoon. The action of the council occasioned surprise in official circles, and, while the Government declined to discuss the new situation, there was an intimation that the Wirth cabinet was disappointed at the council's inability to reach a final and equitable decision.

"We chiefly regret the delay involved by the new procedure," a cabinet official declared, "because it is calculated to prolong the hardships of the already sorely tried populace of Upper Silesia.

Discussing the differences between England and France as reflected in the reports of the deliberations in Paris, a German official said:

"Germany had no interest in promoting in actual break in the ranks of the Entente. She has an abiding faith in the righteousness of her case respecting Upper Silesia, and is quite willing to have the issue decided by the council of the league."

There is evidence some apprehension regarding the nature of the attitude taken by th Poles, in view of the council's decision. It is asserted they are prepared for a fresh invasion of the plebiscite area of Upper Silesia.

London Press Generally Approves Reference to the League.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Aug. 13.—The decision to refer the Silesian question to the League of Nations council is generally approved by the London press, though not always with enthusiasm. Those newspapers least enamored of the Paris decision say it is an expedient, which is far preferable to a break in the relations between France and Great Britain, but still is a strange expedient which will not necessarily result in a speedy settlement.

Where the decision is wholly approved, it is called the wisest decision on a major issue that the Supreme Council has ever taken. The middle view of the newspapers is that it perhaps is the best step that could have been taken in the circumstances. It is admitted on all hands that the decision must add prestige to the League of Nations, especially if the league proves equal to the opportunity.

"The Supreme Council meeting ended in a fiasco, which is a confession of the bankruptcy of that highly abnormal institution," says the London Times editorially today.

"Convened to solve the Silesian problem, it has failed, referring the issue to the League of Nations, thereby avoiding the definite rupture which would likely result from a final affirmation of the profound divergence in the French and British Governments' views.

"The Silesian question still is open. There is no official break between the chief Powers called to proclaim a decision, but they demonstrated to the world their inability to agree; they registered the fact that within the Entente there are two sharply opposed views on the attitude toward Germany."

Harvey Says President Feels Matter a European Issue.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Aug. 13.—Ambassador Harvey, replying to a question by M. Briand, as to what view of the situation Harvey took for the United States, replied:

"The President of the United States has felt from the beginning that the question was one of distinctly European concern. It will be with a sense of relief, therefore, that he will hear of a confirmation of this view by the Supreme Council in referring the question to a body with which the United States is not associated.

"Consequently, as the representative of the President of the United States, I shall refrain from participation."

LEGION MEMBERS GIVEN WAR-TIME WELCOME IN PARIS

Delegation of Americans Leaves There for Unveiling of Joan of Arc Statue at Blois This Afternoon.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Aug. 13.—Members of the American Legion who arrived here yesterday left Paris this morning for Blois, where they are to participate in the unveiling of the statue of Joan of Arc, which was presented to that city by the Joan of Arc Committee of the city of New York. The ceremony, which is to take place at 2 o'clock this afternoon, is to follow a reception to the Americans by the Mayor and municipal authorities at that city.

Paris welcomed the 250 Americans with much the same spirit as that with which they received the poilus when they returned from the great war. There was a genuine ring of enthusiasm to the shouts or greeting from thousands of persons who gathered outside the station where the Americans arrived yesterday afternoon from Cherbourg. It was a repetition of the reception given them when they landed earlier in the day from the steamship George Washington at Cherbourg.

Greeted by 10,000 Persons.

More than 10,000 persons later surrounded the Arc de Triomphe to watch the American veterans pay tribute to their unknown comrade.

Many of the Americans climbed to the top of the auto busses conveying them from the station exuberantly waving their hats and shouting to the Parisians, who were quick to acknowledge the greeting. One group passing the Elysee Palace recognized Premier Briand and gave him three cheers, while the Premier bowed and smiled.

After a reception at the Interallied Club, where Ambassador Hefrick, R. J. Jusserand, the French Ambassador to the United States, and many prominent officials welcomed them, the legionaires went to the Arc de Triomphe. Marshal Foch, Mr. Herrick, Jusserand and many regiments with which the Americans had fought in the war and committees of French veterans were present at the ceremonies here.

Place Silk Flag on Tomb.

Maj. John G. Emery, national commander of the American Legion, who heads the American delegation, placed a silk flag and a wreath of poppies, entwined with French flags, on the tomb of the unknown soldier, saying:

"My comrade, we greet you, not only as a soldier of France, but as our soldier. Let me bring you a spirit that is American. May the spirit of America always cover your soul as the American flag now covers your grave."

When the ceremonies were ended the Americans gave three cheers for Marshal Foch. He was much affected, and remarked that with soldiers such as America had sent to France, it was impossible to lose the war.

PRIEST'S GRAVE BELIEVED TO HOLD ANOTHER BODY

Constable Expresses View After Examining Scene—Baker Charged With Murder of California Clergyman.

By the Associated Press.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 13.—A complaint charging William A. Hightower, itinerant baker, with murder of the Rev. Patrick E. Heslin, Colma priest, was sworn to before Justice of the Peace Ellis C. Johnson at Daly City, San Mateo County, at noon today by Constable A. S. Landini of Colma.

The warrant will be served, it was said, just as soon as Hightower is brought from San Francisco, where he is now under examination.

Landini on his return to San Francisco early today from Salada Beach on the Pacific ocean south of here, announced his belief that another body is buried close to the spot where the remains of the priest were exhumed last Wednesday night.

Constable Landini said that late last night he and others dug in the sand near the priest's grave, but were forced to abandon the search because of a fog. He stated the search would be continued today.

New evidence in connection with the detention of Hightower in the form of tent pegs, a guy rope, cinch blocks and other articles dug up in the sand around the grave of Father Heslin, the police said. These tent accessories, according to the police, fit a small tent secretly removed by them from the hotel room of Hightower, who led the authorities to the priest's body last Wednesday night for the announced intention of obtaining the $6500 reward offered for the recovery. The tent pegs and cinch blocks were recovered from a sand ledge directly above the priest's grave.

It was announced by the police the tent found in Hightower's room was full of fine sand.

Digging at the grave also revealed additional papers and currency belonging to the priest. Some of the papers had been pierced by bullets.

Ten pieces of fish cord found near the grave were said by police to be identical with the cord found wrapped around a bomb contrivance taken from Hightower's room and with which he said he was experimenting.

A woman giving the name of Doris Shirley walked into the police station today, saying that she was in Fresno, Cal., when she read that she was wanted in connection with the investigation. She was accompanied by a cafe entertainer named Roy Putnam. Examination by detectives developed no clew connecting her directly with the slaying.

Police are continuing their search for an unidentified man and a woman, Dolly Mason, said to have been friends of Hightower. Authorities believe these persons, especially the woman, can throw some light on the mystery. It was from Dolly Mason, Hightower said, that he received his information of the location of the slain priest's grave.

The unidentified man is believed by the police to be the stranger who lured Father Heslin from his home at Colma on the pretense that a dying man needed his spiritual ministrations.

LENINE REVOKES FREE POSTAL AND RAILROAD SERVICE

Soviet Russian Workmen Also No Longer to Be Supplied With Free Tools and Household Goods.

By the Associated Press

RIGA, Aug. 13.—Formal decision to revoke free postal, railway, telegraph and tramway service in soviet Russia, together with the abandonment of the free grant of tools and household goods to workmen and the possibility of a gradual change to the monetary systems instead of the exchange of goods are announced in dispatches received here yesterday from the Rosta News Agency, the official soviet news disseminator at Moscow.

These important steps toward putting into effect Lenine's new policy, which are taken as indication that his plan is moving still further in the direction of the industrial and capitalistic systems of the rest of the world than was at first believed, are announced in decrees to the People's Commissars, signed by Lenine.

Detailed instructions drafted by the council of commissars after a consultation with the various trade organizations, show that only the big industries will remain under national management; the others will be regulated by the trade unions.

The decision to charge for the postal, tramway and other services, was made, says the Rosta Agency, "to restore the value of the currency."

By another decree, the Government organizations are instructed to secure payment for everything furnished workmen, except for food rations and medicine given those having cards. This is interpreted as meaning a great curtailment of the free ration list through strict limitation of cards to actual workmen, who will be subjected to collective rationing, factories or departments to receive a food supply based on their output, irrespective of the number of employes.

WHITE HOUSE OUTLINES IN STATEMENT AIMS IN REVISION OF TAXES

conference of House Republicans called for Monday.

Practically winding up revision of the levy sections of the 1918 tax law, the House Ways and Means Committee Republicans voted today to increase from $2000 to $2500 the exemption allowed married men having an annual net income of $5000 or less. This change would be retroactive to January 1, 1921, and would be in addition to the increase of $200 in the exemption for each dependent of a head of a family previously decided upon.

Agreement also was reached, it was said, to decrease the manufacturers' tax on candy from five to three per cent, the manufacturers' tax on furs from 10 to five per cent, the tax on art works from 10 to five per cent, and to repeal all of the so-called luxury levies, including those on carpets, rugs, trunks, traveling cases, pocketbooks, umbrellas and portable lighting fixtures, as well as those on wearing apparel.

Under present plans of Republican leaders, the committee draft of the completed bill, which will be in the form of an amendment to the 1918 law, will be presented to a conference of House Republicans at 1 o. m. Monday and introduced in the House later that day.

Further Income Exemptions.

A further exemption of $500 for married men whose net income is $5000 a year or less was agreed upon yesterday by majority members of the House Ways and Means Committee. The committee also agreed to eliminate the so-called luxury tax on carpets and rugs, trunks, traveling bags, purses, shopping bags, and umbrellas costing in excess of specified amounts.

The manufacturers' tax on candy was reduced from five to three per cent and that on furs and fur goods from 10 to 5 per cent. Decision also was had to leave the taxes on cigarettes, tobaccos and cigars unchanged.

More than $3,666,000 has been collected in the last three weeks as a result of a special drive in 14 cities for the collection of delinquent sales and miscellaneous taxes, the internal revenue bureau has announced. A mobile force of 250 specially trained revenue officers and 2000 deputy collectors is engaged in the work.

ANOTHER STATEMENT BY WHITE HOUSE ON THE PRICE OUTLOOK

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 13.—Strong hope for better prices in the agricultural markets is justified by reductions in the railroad rates on grain for export, already in effect and proposed, according to a statement issued at the White House last night.

Recent reductions in the export rate on grains between Chicago and New York, the statement said, will be followed by sweeping revisions of grain rates generally, in order that the entire agricultural interest may share fully in the benefits.

"In general," the statement continued, "advances in freight costs are passed on to the consumer by adding them to the selling price. But in grains, whose domestic price is dominated by the foreign price of the exported surplus, the producer suffers when rates go up and benefits when they go down. Therefore, though the exports represent a minor share of the total grain production, the lowering of export rates affects the entire crop. These reductions of rates, together with the arrangements for financial assistance to export trade and the assurance that Europe is going to need extraordinary quantities of American foodstuffs, constitute altogether a justification for strong hope that the tendency in the agricultural markets will for some time be decidedly toward better prices."

Hughes' Conference Call Is a Heavy Blow for Preparedness Advocates

Harding Administration Reverts to Wilson Theory That Armaments Should Be Reduced to Point Consistent With Domestic Safety.

By DAVID LAWRENCE,
A Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.
(Copyright, 1921.)

WASHINGTON, Aug. 13.—Preparedness, of which so much was heard first from Republican spokesmen and later from Democrats, has received its first solar plexus blow from the Harding administration. Secretary Hughes, in his formal invitation to Great Britain, France, Italy and Japan to a conference on reduction of armament, has enunciated a doctrine which the liberal element has been preaching for years, only to be derided by their opponents.

Armament, in the opinion of Mr. Hughes, is "not only without economic justification, but is a constant menace to the peace of the world rather than an assurance of its preservation."

There is a school of thought, even in the Harding administration, which doesn't agree with that theory, and in Congress, to be sure, there always has been an element which, like the National Security League and kindred organizations, insisted that the surest preventive for war was preparedness. The naval and military expenditures of the United States Government have been variously defended on the ground that it was necessary to arm against potential foes, but the Harding administration, through the Huges note to the Powers, has reverted to Woodrow Wilson's theory, which is that armaments should be reduced to a point consistent with domestic safety—that armies should be large enough only to exercise domestic police power and that navies should be simply coast guards.

Sequel to Bombing Tests.

But the decision of the Harding administration as reflected in the Hughes note—to insist that armaments are a "constant menace to the peace of the world, rather than an assurance of its preservation," is really a sequel to the latest tests whereby bombing from airplanes was plainly shown to be a danger to the capital ship, which might in the future prove conclusively the waste in the enormous burden of naval armaments. Some hint of this is given in Mr. Hughes' further declaration that "it may also be found advisable to formulate proposals by which in the interest of humanity, the use of new agencies of warfare may be suitably controlled."

In other words, the use of the airplane and airship in dropping bombs has revolutionized warfare and the next war, unless absolutely governed by rules between the Powers involved, will mean an era of unparalleled destruction. The impossibility of getting respect for established rules of warfare was demonstrated in the last war and rather than face the discouraging prospect of trying to regulate a war while it is in progress, the American Government at least believes that the imperative course is to take such steps as will prevent a colossal conflict.

Discussions to Be Wide in Scope.

It is admitted that the white race cannot stand another war like that which began in 1914.

The United States Government has not limited the invitations to a discussion of naval armament, but has asked that all manner of armament be reduced and that all sources of misunderstanding be removed, not merely in the Far East, but throughout the world. The significance of this broad statement is just dawning on official Washington, for it means that the Harding administration has embarked again on the seas of international diplomacy in an effort to accomplish what was left incomplete under the last administration—a definite agreement to end wars. Mr. Hughes pointedly wrote that "it is quite clear there can be no final assurance of peace and the prospect of reduced armaments is not a hopeful one unless this desire finds expression in a practical effort to remove causes of misunderstanding and to seek ground for agreement as to principles and their application."

Broad Understanding Needed.

While it is stoutly denied that the United States intends to set up a rival to the League of Nations, the expectation here is that the disarmament conference will soon develop the necessity of a broad understanding on the subject of preserving peace and that Mr. Harding's ideas for an association with the other nations of the world will find a natural outlet at the November conference.

Meanwhile, Theodore Roosevelt Jr., Assistant Secretary of the Navy, who has been preaching lately the doctrine of his distinguished father to the effect that the surest way to preserve peace was to be prepared for war, finds a different theory expounded by the Secretary of State. Indeed, the Hughes note is hailed as a vindication of those Republicans and Democrats who all along have maintained that preparedness for war with any of the major Powers was the surest way to excite suspicion and provoke bloodshed over controversies that would otherwise smoulder and in time be extinguished by mutual consent.

GUN WITH WHICH POLICE SAY BROKER WAS KILLED FOUND

Bathers at Beach Near Los Angeles Come Upon a Complete 12-Gauge Weapon in Ocean.

BURCH IDENTIFIED BY A MOTORIST

Said to Have Been Seen in Auto Near Canyon Mouth Where Police Believe Gun Was Disposed Of.

By the Associated Press.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Aug. 13.—Bathers on the beach today found and turned over to the authorities the complete 12 gauge shotgun with which the authorities say J. Belton Kennedy, broker, was shot to death near his summer cottage in Beverly Glen, eight miles inland, Aug. 5. Two 12-gauge shells have been found in the glen near the scene of the killing.

Burch Identified by Motorist.

Arthur C. Burch of Evanston, Ill., former college friend of the dead man, held in jail since the day after the killing was said to have been identified yesterday by a motorist who says he encountered Burch in the roadster which the police said had been in the glen on the night of the shooting.

The meeting occurred he said, near Santa Monica canyon mouth, where officers recently declared that they believed the slayer of Kennedy had gone in a machine, throwing the gun used into the ocean.

The witness said that his lights flashed into the car driven supposedly by Burch, and that the man inside the car was wearing dark goggles, although it was then late at night.

Mrs. Obenchain Denies Statement.

Mrs. Madalynne Obenchain, companion of Kennedy the night of the slaying, who was reported early yesterday as saying that she knew something which, if she cared to tell, would permit her immediate freedom, denied late last night that she made such a statement. She said that the only version of the shooting she knew she had told. This involved two "foreigners" whom she originally said brushed by her in the glen after the shots were fired. She said she was shielding no one.

After her alleged statement yesterday she is said to have declared she would not tell what she knew because it "would not be fair to a person in whose innocence I believe."

"Is that Mr. Burch?" she was asked.

"I cannot answer that. Mr. Burch is not talking. Why should I discuss his affairs?"

She said she might previously have given details that would shed light on the tragedy had she not been "dazed."

"I don't think it worth while for me to say it now." "I don't want any one to pity me because I am here. Being in jail means nothing to me. I think only of the loss I have suffered."

SAYS GIRLS OF TODAY HOLD DIFFERENT IDEAS OF MODESTY

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Aug. 13.—Girls of today have a "different conception of modesty," declared Mrs. Percy V. Pennybacker of Austin, Tex., former president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, in an address here yesterday, in which she indicated approval of the shortened skirts of present-day feminine fashion.

"The boys critise the dress of their modish sisters," she said, "but the girls they choose are dressed in similar fashion. No mother who really understands her child will make an issue simply for the sake of exacting obedience."

Patrolman McGrath of the Newstead avenue district was near Lindell boulevard and Euclid avenue at 4 a. m. when he saw an automobile drive away from the apartment house at high speed. Ferraris is at the city hospital.

Shortly after Ferraris was shot a policeman saw two negroes running. He chased them into a building at 6 North Third street, where one of the negroes jumped from a second-story window and escaped. The other, Rice Stevens of 205 South Twenty-second street, was arrested. He admitted taking the money from the cash register, but said the other negro shot Ferraris.

A man with a revolver entered William Waugh's grocery store, 4825 Northland avenue, at 6:30 p. m. He will receive the income of this inheritance until he reached the age of 30, when the principal was to be his outright. ASSURANCE BY RUSSIA OF PRISONERS' RELEASE

First Official Statement of Decision Received in New York.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Aug. 13.—Official announcement that soviet Russia has given permission for all American citizens to leave the country if they desire was made by George Chitcherin, soviet Minister of Foreign Affairs, in a cable message received today by the magazine Soviet Russia.

This is the first official confirmation of the guarantee given to Walter R. Brown of the American Relief Administration at Riga by Maxim Litvinoff, that such permission would be granted. Litvinoff is the soviet envoy for negotiations for Russian famine relief.

The message said:

"All American citizens resident throughout Russia may freely leave the country if they desire. They need only inform the Anglo-American Department of the Peoples' Commissary of Foreign Affairs and present documents of identification in order to obtain vises for departure, which will be granted immediately.

Objections by Litvinoff in Negotiations for Relief.

RIGA, Letvia, Aug. 13.—Difficulties arose today in the negotiations begun here over the draft of an agreement guaranteeing protection of food supplies sent into Russia for famine relief. Maxim Litvinoff, the soviet representative, raised a number of objections, both in principle and details, to the draft, presented by Walter Lyman Brown, the American relief negotiator.

DETECTIVES SAVE SAMPLE OF LIQUOR FROM BROKEN BOTTLE

Detectives last night in the saloon of Tony Rigo, Third and Valentine streets, saved some liquor suspected to be whisky, after Rigo had broken the bottle containing it and the sample will be analyzed. Rigo was behind the bar when detectives entered. He knocked a bottle to the floor, where it broke, and the contents spilled on a newspaper. A Sergeant made a funnel of the paper and poured the liquor into a glass. A gallon of alcohol was found in the rear room. Rigo, who is 35 years old, was arrested.

Anton Roseiglione, 40, of 4664 Labadie avenue, was arrested at 1011 North Seventh street last night and taken to the Soulard Street Police Station to be held for questioning regarding his alleged ownership of the house at 3013 Caroline street, where a still of 1000-gallon capacity was discovered Thursday.

John Strasback, 64, of 8115 Pennsylvania avenue, was arrested when police found a copper still in his home yesterday and a gallon of liquor. They said he admitted making the liquor for himself.

A quart soda bottle, full of supposed whisky, was found behind the bar at the saloon of Michael Roguski, 38, 1900 South Third street, last night. Roguski's wife, Petronella Roguski, was tending bar, but Roguski, who was in a back room, was arrested.

Policemen passing the residence at 1411 Carroll street at 9 o'clock last night were attracted by the odor of liquor. On the first floor, they reported finding seven quarts of whisky, a case of home-made beer and three barrels, which had contained more, they say. No one was at home.

Achievements of Missouri as State Reviewed by Spencer in Sedalia Speech

Addresses Also by Gov. Hyde, Lieut.-Gov. Lloyd, Mayor Kiel and Others Mark St. Louis Day at State Fair.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

STATE FAIR GROUNDS, Sedalia, Mo., Aug. 13.—St. Louis day at the Centennial celebration yesterday was the best day of the exhibition thus far in point of attendance and weather. About 275 St. Louisans came on the special train, which arrived about 11:50, and many more than that already were here, having, like Mayor Kiel, come on ahead.

A parade in which participated the First Missouri Infantry, encamped here with the rest of the infantry units of the National Guard, was the first order after the party had left the special at the edge of the Fair Grounds. A dinner in Liberty dining hall was followed by a brief speaking program. United States Senator Selden P. Spencer delivering the principal address. Spencer said:

"Missouri, the great central State of the nation, separated from the Atlantic Ocean by five states, and alike separated from the Pacific by five states and with two states between its great domain and Canada and also two states between it and the Gulf of Mexico, commands our attention on this day. It is her 100th birthday.

Old Towns Referred To.

"A hundred years of statehood is the glorious history of the past, though a French colony in Saline County and the city of Ste. Genevieve of Ste. Genevieve County were each established nearly a hundred years before Aug. 10, 1821, when the crown of statehood was placed upon Missouri's brow.

"She came into the union at a time when the Constitution of these United States had proved the surpassing wisdom of its provisions. A generation had tried it out. We were joined with the beginning of the second generation after this nation had become a constitutional government.

"Washington and Adams and Jefferson and Madison were the only men who had completed their terms of office as President of the United States. James Munroe was just beginning his second term. John Marshall was in the full glory of his great career as Chief Justice of the United States and only three Chief Justices had preceded him, Jay, Rutledge and Ellsworth, and the aggregate of their united terms of office was only 11 years.

Identified With Early Progress.

"We were identified with the very beginning of our country's progress. Twenty-three sister states had preceded us and were co-operating to develop upon the foundations which had thus been securely laid a nation of incomparable wealth and strength in all material things and about which justice and liberty and equality before the law should be so universal as to safeguard the rights of the individual from violation and to insure prompt and adequate remedies for their wrong. The one hundred years of history in Missouri has established this great record.

"The State of Maine was admitted to the Union but a few months before our own admission to statehood. She then was, as she is today, a commonwealth where thrift and enterprise and deep-seated loyalty abound. We can in a sense compare ourselves with her. There were 298,335 people in Maine when she became a state. There were 66,586 people in Missouri when Missouri was admitted.

"In the census of 1920 the population of Maine had increased during the one hundred years to 768,014, less than three times the population in 1820. The population of Missouri had grown to 3,404,055, more than 50 times its population in 1821.

Comparisons With Maine.

"Maine was a far richer State than Missouri when comparatively together we were admitted to the United States. Today the value of real and personal property in Maine is $521,402,933, according to its assessed value, and the value of real and personal property in Missouri is at least $10,000,000,000. The net income of Missourians of the past year was $409,000,000, five times as great as the net income of our great pine tree neighbor.

"It evidences the mighty material progress which in the providence of God has characterized these hundred years of Missouri's history. One hesitates to prophesy what the same proportion of increase will bring in the hundred years to come. The population of the State would be upward of 175,000,000, more than the total population of the United States and all its possessions, St. Louis would have a population of 30,000,000, ten times as many as the State of Missouri now has. Sedalia would have a population of a million and a quarter, more than the present combined population of St. Louis and Kansas City.

"Better than all the material growth of our great commonwealth, satisfactory as it is, is the devotion of its people to the principles on which our country is founded and which are inseparably interwoven with our future as well as our past welfare.

People the Supreme Law.

"Upon the seal of Missouri is written 'Salus Populi Suprema Lex Esto'—'Let the Safety of the People be the Supreme Law.' The rights of the people as announced in the Declaration of Independence and as safeguarded by the Constitution of the United States are the cherished heritage of Missourians. It means that no man or combination of men is strong enough to deprive the weakest of a single right. It means that life, liberty, and pursuit of happiness are in fact the inalienable rights of every man and that we have a government of law which enforces them and not of men who carry out their personal wishes. It means that we give our willing obedience to the laws which we ourselves enact and are not subject to any man's whim or power. It means that even our laws must not invade the sacred constitutional rights of the individual for any such invading law is itself without right of existence or power of enforcement.

"Lincoln once said, 'the people are the rightful masters of both Congresses and the courts, not to overthrow the constitution, but to overthrow the men who pervert the constitution,' and in the last analysis, every law and every decision comes before the final tribunal of the people's will who work their sovereign will, not by disobedience to the law, nor by lawlessness, nor by revolution, but in the orderly procedure which has been established and which, though it requires patience, will accomplish such changes as are desired.

Need of Education Recognized.

"It is just because the safety of the people is the supreme law, as written on Missouri's seal, and because the people themselves are the final arbiter of every law of the land that we so eagerly recognize the vital and ever-present need of education in our State and in the nation—an education that shall be available to every boy and girl, and shall be so efficient as to make of every Missouri man and woman one who clearly understands our country's history and appreciates her high purpose, and keeps informed as to her problems, and has an abiding determination that in Missouri, as in the United States, it shall continue to be true as it is today, that we live in the fairest, freest, greatest, most God-fearing nation on earth."

Gov. Hyde lamented the lack of knowledge of the average Missourian of the resources of his own State, declaring that Missouri had sent enough immigrants to people a half dozen states in the West—persons who had deserted Missouri for states offering far less advantages. He said that the State administration intends to devote itself primarily to education, that the generations of the future may be better fitted to develop the State to its fullest. He predicted that the control of the nation, agricultural, political, intellectual and industrial, slowly but surely is moving toward the Mississippi Valley and that in the very near future the representatives of Missouri in the two houses of Congress will carry more prestige as such than in the past.

Mayor Kiel said the need of Missouri and St. Louis was for co-operation, getting a laugh when he added, smilingly, "Why, last night I had as a bedfellow on the trip up here, Jimmy Byrnes; and you know here a few short weeks ago Jimmy and I were a bit distant, the atmosphere was cool, so to speak. There were six or seven good fellows on that train."

"Who won?" Charles F. Hatfield of the St. Louis Convention Bureau, queried; Kiel replying that "It was a most fortunate thing that Victor Miller didn't know we were there."

Other speakers included Lieutenant-Governor Lloyd, President R. R. Rucker and Secretary M. V. Carroll of the Sedalia Chamber of Commerce, Mayor F. F. Hatton of Sedalia and John S. Leahy of St. Louis.

The St. Louisans departed for home last night, their train leaving the fairgrounds at 7:30 p. m. Senator Spencer, however, remained to see the pageant and hold a number of political conferences with Hyde. Both he and Hyde said afterward that "everything is satisfactory," though each declared that the patronage situation is unchanged so far as the aspirations of Missourians to Federal appointments is concerned.

HUSBAND OF SLAIN WOMAN IS LOCATED AT TERRE HAUTE

Thomas I. Gilliland, Whose Wife Was Found Murdered in Cornfield, Admits Identity to Police.

Chief of Police Clark of Granite City departed today for Terre Haute, Ind., to get Thomas I. Gilliland, wanted in connection with the death of his wife, Serena, whose body was found buried in a wheat field near Granite City, June 16. Clark received a telephone message from the Terre Haute officials last night, that Gilliland had been arrested there and expressed willingness to come back without requisition papers.

Gilliland, who is 23 years old, was arrested last night at the plant of the Home Packing Co., where he was employed. The Terre Haute police had been furnished with a description and he was taken into custody on a guess that he was the person wanted. Gilliland admitted that he was the man wanted, but said, "They'll have to prove I am guilty."

The body of Mrs. Gilliland was found by Andrew Hoffman and Henry Spree, farmers. It bore marks of violence. It was identified two days later and it developed then that the Gilliands had been wanted by the St. Louis police since April 15, when they disappeared from the home of C. H. Krause, 4454 Forest Park boulevard, where Gilliland had been employed as yardman and his wife as cook. Krause reported to the police that $1000 worth of liquors disappeared at the same time.

It was learned that the Gilliands and another couple had occasionally gone on outing trips to Chouteau Slough, near which the body was buried, and that they drank freely, and that on one occasion Gilliland beat his wife there.

Search has been made for him since.

WOMAN ARRESTED SAID TO HAVE BEEN CARRYING STOLEN GOODS

Police Report Department Store Visitor Had 11 Silk Shirts and 34 Handkerchiefs.

Myrtle Scott, 28 years old, of 305 North Leffingwell avenue, was arrested at 6 o'clock last night in a downtown department store when carrying, the police report, 11 silk shirts and 34 handkerchiefs valued at more than $50, which were identified as having been stolen from counters in the store. A woman who was with her at the time escaped.

Detectives went direct to her home after the arrest and found a woman leaving the place with a bundle containing a dress and some lingerie. In the house they found Blanche Nagel, 24, who admitted, they say having been with the Scott woman at the time of the latter's arrest. She admitted, the police report, stealing the dress and lingerie and also 11 silk shirts. The shirts, she said, she had sold for $11.50 and the dress and lingerie she had just given to the woman leaving the house to sell.

AUTOPSY IN AGED MAN'S DEATH

Symptoms of Robert Boyd, 79, are Said to Indicate Poisoning.

Robert Boyd, 79 years old, who had made his home at the Memorial Home, 2609 South Grand avenue, died at the city hospital at 9 o'clock last night, four hours after he had been taken to the institution from the home. An autopsy will be necessary, doctors said, to determine the cause of death.

Policemen reported they were called to the institution and told Boyd had been acting "queerly" on the third floor of the home and had been seen climbing over bannisters and striking his head repeatedly against the walls. At the hospital doctors said he apparently was suffering from poison. An empty bottle without a label was found in his pocket. Doctors said the symptoms indicated muriatic acid poisoning.

LINCOLN'S QUILL PEN STOLEN

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Aug. 13.—The quill pen used by President Lincoln in signing his first inaugural address has been stolen from the exhibit of the Chicago Historical Society at the Pageant of Progress, it was announced today.

The pen was made from the feather of an American eagle which was killed by an admirer of Lincoln just before the latter's election. The heretofore unpublished letter which accompanied the gift said that the quill was from an eagle which had died rather than sacrifice its liberty.

"And I am sure that you, too, would die rather than sacrifice the liberties of the nation which have been entrusted to your care," the letter added.

Woman Accused of Fortune Telling.

Mrs. Mary Vogelsang, 50 years old a widow living at 2121A Henrietta street, was arrested yesterday by Mrs. Josephine Daley, a policewoman, who said she paid 50 cents for having her fortune told.

The policewoman, who is a widow, was told that her husband was infatuated with another woman and was contemplating a divorce.

EX-CONVICT UNDER SIX CHARGES AS SWINDLER

HERMAN RICHTER.

FOUR ADDITIONAL WARRANTS ISSUED IN RICHTER CASE

Later the forfeit was increased to $4000—still in bonds. Apparently, however, it was harder for Richter to raise the $5000 cash than to produce bonds, for he failed to carry out the contract, and the pledge was forfeited.

Kopetko retains the $4000 in bonds, but made a complaint against Richter on the ground of false pretenses, and such a warrant was issued.

Dr. John A. Robinson, a physician in the Wall Building, appeared and disclosed the fact that he was in possession of 84 of the bonds. They were pledged with him by J. W. Wideman as security for a loan, he said. Wideman, he said, told him that he (Wideman) traded Richter 166 acres of St. Charles County farm land for them.

Woman Makes Complaint.

The warrant charging embezzlement was based on a transaction described by Mrs. Annie Roof of 4286 Washington boulevard. She said she wanted to acquire a home for herself and her brother, Harvey W. Smith, and so went to Richter. The latter promised her, she said, that in exchange for a small amount of money and two lots which her brother owned, he would acquire for them a small house. She said she paid him $515.

Richter, she continued, had her brother sign a paper which he said was a power of attorney. She never could get any satisfaction out of Richter about the house she was to get, and failed to get her money back from him, she said. When policemen confiscated Richter's papers they found a warranty deed, in his favor, to Smith's two lots, and Mrs. Root said she believed this was the paper her brother has unwittingly signed.

Christian Steinbruck of 2356 Louisiana avenue, to whom Richter has referred as "temporary secretary" of the exchange, told Garstang that he supposed he had been temporary secretary, as Richter had told him he was, but he never attended any meetings of the trustees, or performed any official duties. His principal connection with the company, he said, was of another kind.

He said he traded Richter five acres of land in Sacramento Valley, Cal., and two city lots in St. Louis for 16 shares of stock in the Midwest Business Exchange.

These instances were typical, Garstang said, of what he has been able to learn of the history of the Midwest Business Exchange. One person after another accepted the bonds and stock as valuable, without making any serious inquiry to learn whether there were any assets behind them.

NEW EQUIPMENT FOR CITY FIRE DEPARTMENT INSPECTED

Apparatus Consists of Six Pump and Hose Motor Cars and Two Service Trucks.

Six combination pump and hose motor cars and two city service trucks purchased from the bond issue as part of the new motor equipment of the fire department were inspected today on the Twelfth street side of the City Hall by Mayor Kiel and Chief Panzer of the Fire Department and heads of departments.

The pump cars have a stipulated capacity of 750 gallons a minute and have gone beyond that on tests. They cost $11,248.78½ apiece. The service trucks cost $9021 apiece.

The bond issue voted for the fire department was $360,000. Expenditure of $258,000 has been authorized. Four pump cars have been delivered before and four more are to come. Three 85-foot aerial trucks have been ordered, one more service truck is to come and three roadsters for use of district fire chiefs have been received. Two new engine houses are to be built and one remodeled and there will be some money left for other equipment.

$20,000 WASHINGTON AV. FIRE

Fire of undetermined origin, which started at 11:50 o'clock last night in the establishment of the Chesterfield Cap Co., on the third floor of the Lesser-Goldman building, 1209 Washington avenue, set off the automatic sprinklers.

The damage by fire and water to the stock was estimated by Morris Fendelman, president of the Chesterfield company, at $20,000. Stock of the Baum Bros. & Mayer Neckwear Co., on the second floor, was damaged by water. Stock of the Vinsonhaler Shoe Co. on the first floor at 1211 Washington avenue was damaged $1000.

MOTHER GOOSE SHOP BOOKS UNDER INQUIRY

Public Accountant Trying to Find What Became of $450,000 Firm Took In.

While the Mother Goose Shop, a candy store at Seventh and Olive streets, had gross sales amounting to about $200,000 from its opening on Dec. 6 last until June 30, and the sale of capital stock in the Missouri Sweets Distributors, Incorporated, the holding company, brought in about $250,000 up to June 30, Orla M. Hill, attorney for the new management of the corporation, said today that little besides the store furnishings and the good will of the business has been found to show for the $450,000 realized.

A certified public accountant has been going over what books of the company have been found during the last week and will be so occupied for nearly a month. Until then it will not be known what charges have been allowed or what may exist to show for the expenditures.

Total Sales of $200,000.

"From Dec. 6 to June 30 the gross sales record, one of the few books kept, showed total sales of about $200,000," said Hill. "About half of that was profit. The sale of capital stock netted about $250,000, cash. There are no books to determine accurately what became of the $450,000. We may find out how what was left from the establishment was spent and we might find out it was properly spent. If we finally learn all the expenditures they may approximate $450,000, but I cannot conceive that they will. I understand the annual rental on the lease is $40,000."

Some accounts, such as printing, were all mixed up with the personal accounts of W. L. Schachner, a broker, who promoted the company and recently was ousted as president, Hill said.

Debts Placed at $65,000.

Hill said that outstanding debts of the company amount to $65,000. The new management feels that its plans will solve the financial difficulties and desires a working capital of $25,000 for the manufacture of candy for the coming Christmas trade. To meet these immediate needs an adjourned stockholders' meeting, held at the Chamber of Commerce auditorium last night, authorized the issuance of serial notes of any denomination, not to exceed $100,000 in total. These notes will be payable on or before Dec. 31, 1923, and until they are paid off no dividends will be paid. Both stockholders and the general public may buy them. More than 500 of the 1444 or more stockholders were present last night and 80 or more of them subscribed immediately for notes. Five took $1000 apiece.

Stanley Butzel of New York, who managed the shop in December, is here telling the new management what he knows of the former conduct of the business. Schachner, when the company's difficulties were revealed by a stockholder's suit on July 11, said he had discharged Butzel about Dec. 26 because he had put the concern in debt. Hill said today that Butzel resigned Dec. 28 because he found working conditions intolerable.

SIX CATERERS JOIN IN SUIT TO TEST NEW BAKERY LAW

Closing After 9 A. M. Sundays, They Allege, Would Force Them to Break Delivery Contracts.

Six catering concerns and three individuals who make a practice of delivering their products on Sunday, today intervened in the injunction suit which has been filed by Julius Komen, a baker at Fifteenth and Biddle streets, to restrain the city from enforcing a new ordinance which forbids the sale of bakery products after 9 a. m. on Sunday. The ordinance was to have gone into effect tomorrow.

Komen on Thursday obtained from Judge Hamilton a temporary restraining order directed against the city, Mayor Kiel and the Police Department. He bases the suit on the ground that he is a Jew of Orthodox faith, and that Saturday is his Sabbath, as well as that of most of his customers. The intervening petitioners base their suit on the ground that they deliver under contracts, which the ordinance would compel them to violate.

The interveners are Dorr & Zeller Catering Co., Zeller Bros. Catering Co., Scheller Catering Co., Goodfellow Bakery, Hodiamont Bakery, South Side Bakery, A. P. Schroeder, J. E. Hiestandt and Charles Zuehlke. They ask that the ordinance be declared unconstitutional.

EX-CONVICT CAUGHT IN RAID

He Is Wanted in Chicago on 46 Charges of Liquor Thefts.

Of five men taken in a police raid on the saloon of Michael Strubel, 1501 South Broadway, last night, one was identified later as Fred Greiser, an ex-convict and police character, who is wanted in Chicago on 46 charges of liquor thefts and for jumping a $10,000 bond. Chicago police wired that they would send for him immediately.

After being taken to the Soulard Street Station, the prisoner, who at first gave his name as David Frank, 26 years old, was identified by Capt. Kirk as the man who escaped from the workhouse here in 1914, after inciting a riot among the prisoners, and who later was sentenced to five years for assault. He admitted his identity. One of the thefts of which he is accused in Chicago is that of $10,000 worth of liquor from the cellar of a wealthy man.

HUGHES IN CHARGE OF DISARMAMENT MATTERS

President Will Not Be Delegate to Conference but Gives Secretary Full Powers.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 13.—Any expectation that President Harding will himself act as a delegate to the disarmament conference has been overthrown by a White House announcement that he had definitely designated Secretary Hughes of the State Department to head the American delegation.

It was said that other members were yet to be chosen, although the President is understood to have decided that at least one of the places shall go to a United States Senator and the choice of a woman as a member of the delegation still is within the range of possibility.

The exact role to be played by the President never has been officially defined, but the general expectation is that after delivering the opening address on Nov. 11, he will remain in the background of the negotiations, leaving direct contact with the foreign commissioners to his accredited representatives. By this course he will be in a position similar to that of President Poincare of France, when he opened the Versailles conference, and then retired from actual participation in the proceedings.

Not only has the President placed Secretary Hughes as the head of the American delegates, but he has turned over to the State Department the task of clearing away all the details remaining to be disposed of before the conference meets.

One of the problems, which threatens to occupy the attention of a large staff before it is solved, was tackled by the department today, when it offered its aid to the embassies and legations of the invited nations in securing suitable quarters and other accommodations for the visiting delegations. Each of the Powers is expected to send a large corps of experts, clerks and other attaches with its commission and the task of providing them, not only a place to live, but office space as well, may require an extensive survey of housing facilities.

Admiral Kato to Head Japanese Delegation to Conference.

By the Associated Press.

TOKIO, Aug. 13.—Vice Admiral Kanji Kato, director of the Naval Staff College, has been informally selected by the Japanese navy to head this country's delegation to the conference on disarmament and Far Eastern questions to be held in Washington late this autumn, says the newspaper Nichi Nichi.

He is to be accompanied to the United States, it is said, by Capts. K. Yamanashi, Y. Yedas Nagao and six other officers.

UNLAWFUL HOMICIDE VERDICT IN KILLING OF ALABAMA PRIEST

Warrant to Be Issued Today Charging Preacher, Who Shot Him, With Murder.

By the Associated Press.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Aug. 13.—A verdict of unlawful homicide was returned yesterday by Coroner J. D. Russum, who investigated the killing of Father James E. Coyle, dean of the Catholic Church for North Alabama, yesterday, as he sat on his porch of his home. A warrant was issued today charging the Rev. Edwin R. Stephenson with murder in connection with the death.

According to the police, Stephenson confessed that he had shot the priest after the latter had struck him during an altercation which arose, Stephenson said, when "I remonstrated with him for marrying my daughter, Ruth, to a man against whom we had lodged objections."

Stephenson's daughter was married recently to Pedro Gussman, a native of Porto Rico, but who has resided in this city for 12 years.

Sheriff J. C. Hartsfield told the Coroner of the visit of Mrs. Mary Stephenson, wife of the accused man, to his office about 45 minutes before Father Coyle was shot. She was seeking assistance in locating her daughter, Ruth, who, she said, had run away, according to the Sheriff, and she placed the responsibility for the act of the girl on the Catholic Church.

BOY'S FEET BURNED IN ASH

Thin Crust Over Fire Gives Way Under His Weight.

John Kilmor, 8 years old, of 610 Summit avenue, East St. Louis, was severely burned on the feet yesterday when a thin crust of earth and refuse near the plant of the Eagle-Picher Lead Co., Exchange avenue and the Louisville & Nashville Railroad tracks, gave way, allowing him to fall into a burning mass of tan bark ash. He is the fifth child to be injured in a similar manner in the last six months. One child died from the burns received.

The property is owned by the Pennsylvania Railroad Co., and is used as a dumping ground by residents and business concerns in the neighborhood. A smoldering fire, started through spontaneous combustion, burns in the refuse and leaves only a thin crust over the burning mass, which is concealed from view. The fire department has worked on the fires several times in the last few weeks.

To Observe Feast of Assumption.

A mass, sermon and benediction will be given at St. Nicholas' Catholic Church, Nineteenth and Lucas, next Monday, at 12:10 p. m., in observance of the Feast of Assuhption. The Rev. H. G. Adrian, 1827 Lucas avenue, will officiate.

MRS. PEPER'S ESTATE VALUED AT $223,235

Inventory Lists Stock in Tobacco Company and Mining Concern and Downtown Realty.

Property valued at $223,235.79 is listed in the inventory of the estate of Mrs. Caroline J. Peper, principal heir of the late Christian Peper, founder of the Christian Peper Tobacco Co., which was filed in the Probate Court yesterday afternoon. She died Aug. 1, 1920, and her will is being contested.

The estate includes stock in the Christian Peper Tobacco Co., $127,364; stock in the Key West Mining and Milling Co., $6327; real estate at 512-14-16 Wash street and 32 and 34 North Sixth street, $86,134.99, and chattels, $3409.80.

L. Frank Ottofy, temporary administrator of the estate, recently obtained permission in the Probate Court to institute receivership proceedings against the Christian Peper Tobacco Co., 721 North Main street, in which the estate holds 2087 shares. He alleged that for the last seven years the company had paid no dividends, although doing a profitable business. He said that he had been informed that the management had dissipated the profits in payment of excessive salaries.

Mrs. Peper had conveyed two-thirds of her estate, which had come to her from her father and the value of which had been estimated at between $500,000 and $750,000, to her daughter in 1911, to avoid litigation after her death. The will contest was brought by her son, Christian Peper Bushman, and is principally directed against his sister, Miss Estelle Peper Bushman, who had received the two-thirds of the estate in 1911, and who was willed a third of the remainder without reservation.

Mrs. Peper, after divorcing Bushman several years ago, took her maiden name, Peper.

TWO NEW COURT PETITIONS IN DE HAAN ESTATE CASE

Son Asks to Be Confirmed as Executor and Widow Seeks to Have Will Construed.

Dr. Adrian de Haan of East St. Louis applied to the Probate Court at Belleville yesterday for confirmation as executor of the estate of his father, the late Dr. H. J. de Haan, proposing to give a bond of $150,000, although the will stipulated that no bond was to be required. It is understood that his appointment is now acceptable to the young widow, the second wife of the deceased, who had opposed probation of the will and announced appeal from a decision adverse to her, but permitted the time limit to expire without making the appeal.

The will created a trust to continue 10 years, 34 per cent of the income to go to the widow and the other 66 per cent to the three children by the first marriage, only $1 being left to the infant child of the second marriage.

Following Dr. Adrian de Haan's action, Mrs. de Haan filed in the Circuit Court a petition asking for construction of the will as to whether the income shall be distributed annually or at the end of the 10-year period and whether the widow's equity is a life estate or in fee simple.

Cuts on Hands Cause Man's Arrest.

John Dahl, 28 years old, of 4930A Page boulevard was arrested on the downstairs porch at that address at 2:30 a. m. today when a policeman noticed his hands were cut. In his pockets a revolver and 15 packages of cigarettes were found. Thirty-seven additional packages of cigarettes were found in his home. Joseph Marconi, proprietor of a saloon at 4878 Easton avenue which had been robbed early in the night after a window was broken and where stains were found on the sill, later, identified the revolver and cigarettes as those taken from his saloon. Dahl, the police say, made no statement.

Robert Gillen of 3408 Semple avenue, owner of the automobile used by four burglars, one of whom, Lloyd Brugere, of 4232W Clayton avenue, was shot and killed at 3:40 a. m. Tuesday when they were robbing a store at Imperial (West Kimmswick), Mo., has been released by the St. Louis police. Gillen told the police the automobile was stolen from in front of his home last Monday. Lee Brazier and Lester Woods, detained with Gillen, also were released.

Reviews of the New Books

"THE AMERICAN EMPIRE," by Scott Nearing. (The Rand School of Social Science.)

THE key to this pamphlet by the well known Socialist is the word "empire." Everything he does not like is "imperialistic," and he does not like anything at all as at present constituted. This is a free country, potentially at least, he admits, but the people are "ignorant of their real interests." It is supposed that Mr. Nearing and the Rand School of Social Science are the only repositories of knowledge as to what constitutes the real interest of the people. Of course he does not like us. The American people are imperialistic, and naturally so because "the sons and daughters of the native born American stock are, in the main, the descendants of the conquering, imperial races of the modern world." So we have builded an American empire—but the plain people do not know it. Again it must be repeated that Mr. Nearing and the Rand School of Social Science are the only repositories of knowledge. The author advocates a new system, "a system belonging to the workers, and managed by them for their benefit." Does this mean Bolshevism and Socialism? Deponent says not. The Deponent does not know, but surely Mr. Nearing and the Rand School of Social Science do know. Is it possible that as to their courage to say so they have not the same colossal conceit as they have as to their knowledge?

A CRITIC IN PALL MALL, by Oscar Wilde. (G. P. Putnam's Sons.)

A COLLECTION by E. V. Lucas of some of Wilde's essays and reviews, interspersed with an occasional sonnet, the volume being one of a series of 15, constituting a complete edition of his works. Wilde was one of the most brilliant writers of his time and while his literary efforts have shared the shadow that fell upon his character he will always live as a master of the English tongue.

In a work on the amenities of book collecting, A. Edward Newton recently devoted much space to Wilde. Of him, Newton wrote: "For many years, indeed until quite recently, his name cast a blight over all his work. This was inevitable but it was inevitable also that the work of such a genius should sooner or later be recognized. Only a few years ago I heard a cultured lady say: 'I never expected to hear his name mentioned in polite society again.' But the time is rapidly approaching when Oscar Wilde will come into his own, when he will be recognized as one of the greatest and most original writers of his time. When shall we English-speaking people learn that a man's work is one thing and his life another?"

Newton dalls attention to the fact that even when Wilde was neglected and despised in prison he wrote a great poem, "The Ballad of Reading Gaol." In his "De Profundis," written from prison to his friend Robert Ross, Wilde lamented: "I, once a lord of language, have no words in which to express my anguish and my shame."

In bringing his works before the public again, the Putnam Company is proceeding on the belief that his art should be judged apart from his life; and the collection of writings, little seen for nearly 30 years, well repay perusal for their wonderful versatility alone. They range from "Dorian Gray," a rather poisonous work which one critic defined as a book that a modern young girl would hesitate to put in the hands of her mother, to the supreme delicacy and purity of his fairy stories. The brilliance of his wit in the plays "The Importance of Being Earnest" and "Lady Windermere's Fan" is in vivid contrast to other of his witticisms which, after his disappearance, were pirated by the burlesque stage. Those who have heard the comedian of the footlights remark that Niagara Falls would be more wonderful if the water flowed the other way may not know that this and a host of Western anecdotes, dear to our American comic weeklies, were originated by Wilde. As for his poetry, it has often been pronounced as musical as that of Swinburne.

"WOODLAND TALES," by Ernest Thompson Seton. (Doubleday, Page & Co.)

ERNEST THOMPSON SETON is well known as the author of "Wild Animals I Have Known" and for his nature stories. And this latest book of his, written "for children of all ages who have not outgrown the charm of a fairy tale," is an excellent example of his style. It handles woodland topics from the romantic standpoint and the author imparts a tremendous fund of useful information to young readers in a chatty fashion that will make an impression on the juvenile mind.

Statements of an ordinary natural history as to why a squirrel's tail is bushy might be presented in too dry a form for the average child reader to remember. But Seton's comparison of the caudal appendage to a parachute and his illustrations of the fashion in which a squirrel steers itself on its leaps and breaks the rapidity of its falls with its extendable tail will undoubtedly be read with interest. The anecdote is coupled with a description of the uses of tails on other animals—how the wild hog developed the tail-wagging habit as a sign of peace, for instance.

The hurtful element in poison ivy and the cures for the miniature blisters and skin infection it causes are set forth in such fashion that even a young child will know what to do after accidentally coming in contact with the leaf. Indian folk lore is cleverly woven into the stories.

"MUST WE FIGHT JAPAN?" by Walter B. Pitkin. (The Century Company.)

THE author answers his question conditionally. He does not agree with those who say that Japan and the United States are too far apart to be drawn into war, or with the Californians or other Pacific Coast people who contend that the only question is how soon we shall be fighting Japan and how we shall manage to win. He holds that war with Japan is a possibility, but not a certainty. On comparing the situation now with that of 10 years ago he finds first, that there are many more powerful forces making for war between Japan and the United States than there were for making war between Germany and the United States, and second, that there are some powerful forces working to prevent such a war now that were not working then. The question is which set of forces will prevail.

In the author's opinion war will arise not so much from the situation in Hawaii and California, tense as that may be, but from a conflict of interests between the United States and Japan in China and Siberia. Japan is increasing in population very rapidly and must find an outlet for her surplus millions. Her present policy is to "use her political power to extend her economic interests" and then "include all new territory contributing to those interests under political sway." Japan's most convenient field for exploitation is in China and Siberia. It so happens that active American capitalists are ambitious to enter that same field for similar purposes, and "it stands to reason that you cannot send thousands of American engineers and salesmen and bankers into the same military region in which thousands of Japanese engineers, salesmen and bankers are pouring all for the same reason without multiplying the sources of conflict, friction and open hostility. Not all the fine speeches at bankers' dinners and missionary gatherings will ever change that elemental fact of human nature, and the sooner we frankly recognize it, and instead of trying to shoo it away with fine words, adjust ourselves to it, the better for all mankind. We Americans may easily become pugnacious again, forget our war debts and allow ourselves to be led into another foreign war after we have become deeply involved in the fortunes of Asia. This outcome is not inevitable. It is merely possible.

After stating the situation in this manner, the author offers this solution. First, there must be the "honest recognition of the brute fact that both Japan and the United States desire and are able, to manage each its own home affairs without interference from the other." Second, there must be "no less honest recognition of the larger fact that friendly relations between the countries must be built upon popular education." He does not hold that a better knowledge on the part of the Japanese of what Americans need and wish and on the part of the Americans of what the Japanese are troubled with and aspire to, will remove all difficulties, but he maintains that it will incline men to "arrange better working compromises than they are now disposed to do." In the final analysis, war or peace with Japan depends on whether we succeed in developing a scientific national policy.

The chapters on Hawaii and California are illuminating, and those on the food problem and the rivalry between the races for the possession of the world are very skillfully drawn. Likewise the comparison that is made between Japan and Imperial Germany before the recent war wherein 15 points of similarity are shown, is very interesting and suggestive.

THE WAYS OF THE GODS, by Algernon Sidney Crapsey. (International Press.)

DR. CRAPSEY relates, in the introduction of this work, that in the famous Duomo of Florence, he found the chapel of St. Joseph thronged with worshipers, while those of Mary and other saints were comparatively neglected.

Pondering this fact, he came to the conclusion that "the experience of Joseph was the experience of all the gods; in favor today, neglected tomorrow. One god going, another god coming." Such was the spiritual history of the race. "The gods have followed each other in an orderly succession, their going and coming determined by the industrial development of the people and the consequent changes in social and political organization."

Beginning with the Manes, Lares and Penates, Roman household gods, the Olympian gods of Greece are next considered, then the Hebrew Jehovahs, succeeded by "the god Christus." Each of these two, originally gods of slaves and workingmen, it is declared, became later gods of a rich and powerful constituency, radical changes in their religions accompanying these changes in relation.

Peter's knowledge of Christ's resurrection, and testimony thereto, is viewed as a case of "psychic projection," while the Magdalene's vision "was due to the well-established fact that at the hour of death and for some limited time afterward the soul departing has the power to make its presence known to receptive spirits."

The detailed treatment of later historic facts need not here be followed at length. In the East Christianity was ripe for judgment, and, conquered by Islam, "became a subject religion, a stagnant religion that has been the breeding place of ignorance and tyranny; the Western, with more vitality divided into Catholics and Protestants, both of which have lost all practical value. "The Christian religion, with its Judaic exclusiveness, its Greek subtlety and its Roman tyranny, is inadequate to the spiritual necessities of the present age and the age to come." The watchword of the new time is declared to be "Evolution," its religion the Religion of Humanity.

The deepest fact in human life is religion. Leaders in the best modern thought treat reverently all ethnic religions, even their most repulsive phenomena. This element is distinctly lacking in the treatment by Dr. Crapsey of sacred themes.

In 1906, on a charge of heresy, Dr. Crapsey was deposed from the Protestant Episcopal ministry. One ignorant of the circumstances has no right to pass on the justice of this act. But it may be said that, however acceptable he may be as an ethical lecturer, or as a parole officer of the State of New York, this work furnishes no evidence that its author has now a gospel suited to the needs of a sin-maimed, suffering, sorrowing world.

"THE PEOPLE OF MEXICO," by Wallace Thompson. (Harper & Bros.)

THE story of how a strangely conglomerate population was molded into the Mexican of today and the fashion in which the savagery of the Indian blood is continually struggling to rise to the surface in the "mestizos," or mixed bloods, who form so large and troublous a proportion of the population in the unsettled republic to the south, is well set forth in this work.

Porfirio Diaz is given credit for realizing that only the power of a white and dominant aristocracy could save Mexico from herself, and the progress made during his administration is pointed to as proof of the soundness of his theories. Once his control was removed, Mexican politics again became those of the machete and rifle. White leaders did not bother with political regeneration of their country and Indianism has entirely failed to bring order out of the situation.

In spite of the exaggerated figures of population prepared by Cortez, it appears there were only about 6,000,000 Indians in the country when the first Spaniards completed its conquest. In three centuries, or by 1823, when the first moderately accurate census was taken, 300,000 white men had reduced the Indians to 2,500,000, and at the same time had created about 2,000,000 mestizos. At the time of Diaz the pure Creoles, as the descendants of Spanish immigrants whose blood was untainted by Indian admixture were known, numbered about 1,000,000.

In 1910, the population was about 15,000,000. It was a third of that total in 1793, so in 120 years the inhabitants have only trebled in number—a striking illustration of the mortality due to pestilences, revolutions and various other causes. In all these years the hatred of the white man appears to have developed among the mestizos.

This situation has afforded opportunity for the constant revolutions in the country and the lack of any common interest in national welfare. This political status, however, is known in a general way to all who have followed the occurrences in Mexico since Diaz was deposed. What will be read with reminiscent interest by all who have ever visited in Mexico are the chapters devoted to conditions among the people themselves.

For instance, the custom of wealthy families in sending the cook to the market each day to purchase supplies for that day only is not due to a slipshod fashion of housekeeping, as many visitors have supposed. By long experience the employer has found that the cook of the great day will waste any food that is not required for the meal on which he she is at work and this is so much a national tendency that even the tiny paper bag of salt for the table cookery is a regular morning purchase.

The description of the favorite Mexican foods of the lower classes is also of interest. The fondness for greasy, high-flavored meats and dishes and the fact that a Mexican mother considers a month-old child able to eat a greasy soup, heavy with tortillas and hot with pepper, may account for a large part of the infant mortality in that country. The ravages in the population caused by the attitude of its members toward disease is made the subject of special description.

University City Approves Tax Rate.

University City in a special election yesterday voted, 165 to 91, to continue its tax rate at 50 cents on the $100 valuation. It had been proposed to reduce the rate to 44 in conformity with the legislative requirement that the tax collected this year shall not be 10 per cent more than that of last year.

The FLAMING FOREST

The Latest and Greatest Northland Novel

By JAMES OLIVER CURWOOD

Author of "The River's End" and "The Valley of Silent Men."

MARIE-ANNE

She confessed trying to kill him. And Carrigan knew she was another man's wife. Yet, while she unaccountably kept him a prisoner, he secretly touched her hair with his lips.

This is the third and last of Curwood's tensely dramatic stories of the "Three-River Country." His first two sold over 250,000 copies. That would have been flattery to most writers.

To Curwood, who lives the vivid north woods life of which he writes, it was a fighting challenge.

He determined to end the trio with the greatest story he ever told. And how he has succeeded!

He has written one of the greatest adventure stories in the English language—a book that fairly sweeps you away for breathless hours of wild adventure, mystery and romance. Don't let yourself miss this tremendous new tale.

'DR. GRAY EAGLE' CLAIMS RIGHT TO DISTRIBUTE INDIAN LANDS

Dark-Skinned Man Says He Is Authorized by Government to Pass on Lineage.

A dark-skinned man, whose printed card identifies him as "Dr. Chief Gray Eagle, nephew of Sitting Bull, Head Chief of All Tribunal Chiefs of the United States and Canada, in charge of all Indian Affairs in the Middle West," is in St. Louis seeking persons of Indian blood to take possession of valuable Western lands that he said President Harding had promised to allot to descendants of Indians. He is with a negro family at 3115 Lucas avenue, [illegible] says he has registered 25 St. Louisans of Indian blood, whom he has recommended to the Commissioner of Indian Affairs at Washington, for participation in the allotments.

Dr. Gray Eagle charges a fee for registration and says he has been authorized by the Government to be the sole judge of one's claims to Indian lineage. He said he could infallibly determine the Indian strain by examination of the finger nails and the cheekbones. He has no credentials, from the Government or anyone else, showing that he is acting with authority from Washington.

He is 93 years old, according to his statement, and adds he was once famous as a football player in the position of "backstop" on the eleven of Carlisle University. He added that he was also a graduate of Yale.

Woman, in Ill Health, Shoots Self.

Mrs. Lydia Kuegler, 27 years old, wife of Charles F. Kuegler, a painter of 3920 Easton avenue, shot herself above the heart at 10:15 o'clock last night while in a room adjoining one in which her husband was sleeping. The shot aroused the husband, who had Mrs. Kuegler taken to the Missouri Baptist Sanitarium. Doctors said her condition was critical. The husband told the police his wife had been dependent for some time because of ill health.

RED CROSS IS INVESTIGATING REPORTED $11,000 SHORTAGE

Special Examiner's Working on Books at National Headquarters in Washington.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 13.—National Red Cross officials have under investigation an apparent shortage of $11,000 in funds kept in the Washington headquarters, according to a statement issued by Dr. Livingston Farrand. A discrepancy discovered during regular audits resulted in disclosing the possibility that the money might have been abstracted from a special fund kept for the purchase of office furniture and supplies.

The Red Cross, however, was declared to be fully protected against loss by bonding company obligations. Special examiners working on the records in conjunction with all the employes responsible for safe keeping of the funds have not definitely established the existence of a shortage.

MATTY TAKES AUTO RIDE ON HIS 41ST BIRTHDAY; HEALTH MUCH IMPROVED

SARANAC LAKE, N. Y., Aug. 13.—Christy Mathewson, idol of the baseball fans in the United States for many years, passed one of the happiest days of his life here today—his forty-first birthday—he told friends last night.

The former pitching star of the New York National League club, who has been here for more than a year following an attack of tuberculosis, said he was feeling better than for some time past, and that he hoped for a complete early recovery.

Mathewson spent the day with Mrs. Mathewson and their son, Christy Jr. They went motoring for half an hour in the morning, Mathewson chatting and laughing with friends on the street.

An enthusiastic angler, Mathewson said today that he is awaiting a chance to get out in the woods. His health has improved to such an extent that he is now permitted to take an automobile ride every other day.

The two teams are practicing daily and hot tennis is expected when they take the field next Thursday. Following the announcement of Capt. S. M. Jacob of the Indian team, that L. Deane and A. H. Fyzee probably will compose the Indian doubles entry, the four members of the Indian outfit are competing to determine the singles entrants on the basis of intrateam competition. It is expected that Jacob and Manomed Sleem probably will play in the two singles matches scheduled to start Thursday.

SPORT SALAD

By L. C. Davis

GOING DOWN.

OH, Paddy, dear, and did you hear
The news that's going round?
The price of candy has come down
To thirty cents a pound.
The retail price of clothing, too,
Has taken quite a drop,
And there are great reductions in
The haberdasher's shop.

But there's a pestilential guy
Who hasn't heard the news,
And tries to make the public buy
His sixteen-dollar shoes.
Now, if those pesky profiteers
Don't bring their prices down,
We'll just refuse to buy their shoes
And laugh them out of town.

RUBAIYAT OF HOMERS I SLAM.

THOUGH many thrilling incidents occurred
That tend to keep the public interest stirred,
The one outstanding feature seemed to be:
"Bambino hammered out his forty-third."

A throne may totter, or a King may fall,
A Prince upon the President may call;
What boots it to the bird who likes to read
About the way Bambino slams the ball?

A famous battle may be lost or won,
But after everything is said and done,
The palpitating public first will read
About Bambino's forty-fourth home run.

HE'S LOOSE AGAIN.

See where the peaceful village of Marion, O., was shot up by Dan Cupid last Wednesday.

Wonder if Dan Cupid will be invited to President Harding's disarmament party? That little cuss is getting too handy with his bow and arrow.

PLAYS NO FAVORITES.

WHEN Cupid goes upon the trail,
His aim is quite uncanny;
The old, the young, the strong, the frail
All look alike to Danny.

His victims fall before his aim,
Against all rhyme or reason;
When little Dan goes out for game
It's always open season.

CRADLE-SIDE WEIGHT.

"Twins Weigh 11 and 17 Ounces." Headline. Two more lightweight champions in the field.

See where the earth passed through the tail of a comet on Aug. 8. That ought to encourage the camel to take another shot at the eye of a needle.

Dear Salad: I'm afraid I am a revolutionary golfer. Out in 75 and back in 84. PATRICE.

Editor Sport Salad: I am a William Jennings Bryan golfer. Out in '96 and still out. BOURBON.

Business of making a wry face.

32 PITCHERS USED IN EIGHT GAMES; FIVE GO THROUGH NINE INNINGS

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Aug. 13.—Thirty-two pitchers were used in eight major league games yesterday. Five twirlers, who started and finished, were Grimes of the Brooklyn Nationals, Cooper of Pittsburg, Smith of the Philadelphia Nationals, Coveleskie of the Cleveland world's champions, and Vangilder of the St. Louis Americans.

Two pitchers, Smith of the Philadelphia Nationals and Scott of Boston, got off to a bad start in the first Quaker-Braves contest, neither lasting one-third of a game. They were started again in the second encounter, Smith blanking his opponents, although yielding 12 hits, while Scott went seven innings. Smith received credit for both victories and Scott was charged with both defeats.

Only two New York players, Frisch and Snyder, were able to hit Grimes. Frisch made three of the four Giant hits.

Pittsburg enjoyed a merry-go-round in the first innings at the expense of Cheeves and York of Chicago. Thirteen Pirates went to bat and seven scored.

Babe Ruth has 50 games in which to make 10 home runs and equal his 1920 record-breaking mark. The Yankee slugger has made five homers in the past week, bringing his total up to 44.

Football Score Card Out.

MINNEAPOLIS, Aug. 13.—A new system for keeping tab of every phase of a football game has been perfected by Merrit I. Wheeler of El Paso, Tex., who today was on his way to Chicago to confer with publishers with reference to turning out a scoring sheet.

He conferred here yesterday with Dr. H. L. Williams, football coach of the University of Minnesota. Wheeler said he had obtained a recommendation from Dr. Williams regarding the system.

The plan advocated by Wheeler would enable scorers keeping records of football games to jot down with a minimum waste of pencil every detail of play, including individual records.

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N. Y., Aug. 13.—Sir Barton, famous race horse, was sold last night by Commander J. K. L. Ross of Montreal to Montford Jones and J. E. Madden, Kentucky horsemen. The price was not made

Youth Ahead of Veteran in T-M Golf Title Final

Von Elm of Salt Lake City Four Up on Bromfield After First 18 Holes.

By the Associated Press.

DENVER, Col., Aug. 13.—George Von Elm of Salt Lake City, was 4 up on L. D. Bromfield of Denver at the end of the first 18 holes of their match for the trans-Mississippi golf championship here today.

The match was all even at the end of nine holes.

Cards:

Morning Round.

OUT—
Von Elm—653, 443, 544—38.
Bromfield—444, 434, 545—37.

Von Elm took four of the last five holes. The Utah golfer made the second nine in 35, one under par.

In:
Von Elm—444, 534, 434—35—73.
Bromfield—447, 345, 465—42—79.

Play in Detail—Morning.

Von Elm's first drive was to the rough and his third over the green. It took him two more to get before the pin while Bromfield had a 4, 1 under par.

Von Elm outdrove Bromfield 10 yards on the 413-yard second, but pitched short, then missed a putt. Bromfield's second was within 15 feet of the pin and he won the hole in 4 to Von Elm's 5.

At the 401-yard Bromfield put his second shot on the green, but took two putts, holed his third from off the putting ground.

Th efourth hole, 283 yards, produced two bad drives, but both players made recoveries and had par fours.

Poor work on the green lost Von Elm the 156-yard fifth. He pitched one dead 20 feet short of the cup and took three putts while Bromfield played safe to the right an dhis second was in the lip of the hole.

Von Elm's drive on the 384-yard sixth was stymied by a tree, but he shaved it for a fine approach, holing a 20-foot putt for a birdie 3. Bromfield had the same tie, but took four.

The 337-yard seventh again saw Von Elm in trouble on his drive. He pitched his second into a trap, while Bromfield was on the green, but Bromfield overran the cup twice and the hole was halved in fives.

NEW YORK, Aug. 13.—Suzanne Lenglen, French tennis champion, arrived today on the steamship Paris, to try the skill of America's women stars on their home courts.

Representatives of the United States Lawn Tennis Association and the American Committee for devastated France, went to the pier to meet the French queen of the courts and planned to escort her this afternoon to a tennis court, where she will start limbering up for her campaign.

Her first match is scheduled for Monday with Miss Eleanor Goss, as opponent, in the opening round of the women's national championship at Forest Hills.

Mlle. Lenglen's party includes, besides her mother, A. R. de Joannis, vice president of the French Lawn Tennis Federation, and Mme. de Joannis.

Mlle. Lenglen and M. de Joannis will be guests of honor tomorrow evening at a dinner arranged by members of the American Committee for Devastated France, in the interests of which she will appear in exhibition matches in September.

Hits in 28 Straight Games.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Aug. 13.—By hitting safely in each game of yesterday's doubleheader with St. Paul, "Bunny" Brief, Kansas City first baseman, brought his record of safe-hits to 28 consecutive games. His hits yesterday consisted of two doubles in the first game and a double in the second game.

Here's America's Davis Cup Team, Probably the Best in History

THE Davis Cup Committee, in session last night at New York, named the men who are to represent the United States in the challenge round, to be played at Forest Hills, Long Island, Sept. 2, 3 and 5. The team was exactly that forecast in yesterday's Post-Dispatch and consisted of the following players:

WILLIAM T. TILDEN II, Philadelphia, U. S. and world's hard and grass court champion.

WILLIAM M. JOHNSON, San Francisco, former U. S. champion.

R. NORRIS WILLIAMS II, Boston, former U. S. champion.

WATSON M. WASHBURN, New York, No. 5 ranking player in the United States.

The committee considered but one other name—Vincent Richards; but evidently he was not seriously thought of.

The committee in naming Tilden manifested some anxiety concerning him in the following statement: "Tilden's condition caused considerable uneasiness, but he has been resting for some time and OUGHT to be in good shape by September."

That "ought" seems to imply considerable doubt. The committee considers Johnson in his normal form for this stage of the season, and thinks Williams and Washburn are the logical doubles combination and "have both done very well in singles."

There is no doubt about this quartet. If right, any two of them could defend the title successfully.

Jack Britton Only Champion To Come Back Twice After Defeat

Pete Herman's Recent Performance Excelled by Welterweight Who on Two Occasions Beat the Man Who Previously Had Dethroned Him in Championship Battles.

By Robert Edgren.

(Copyright, 1921.)

WHEN Pete Herman won back the bantamweight championship by outpointing Joe Lynch in that 15-round bout in Brooklyn, he did a fine piece of work, but didn't break any records. Winning back a title has been done before. Still, the cases on record are very few.

No heavyweight champion ever rewon a lost world championship. Several had a chance and couldn't make good. Sullivan never tried because when he lost to Corbett he was a fat old man and far beyond all possibility of coming back.

Corbett tried and was whipped twice with ease by Jeffries.

Fitzsimmons lost the title to Jeffries, and later trained hard and made a heroic attempt, giving Jeffries a terrific gruelling before nature gave out and Fitz dropped when Jeff dug one into his body and cracked him on the chin with a straight left.

Jeffries retired and failed to come back when he was dragged out again six years later.

Burns gave it up after losing to Johnson, and Johnson became a hopeless hasbeen, after being whipped by Willard at Havana.

One middleweight lost the world title and came back. This was the famous Stanley Ketchel, who was beaten by Billy Papke in Los Angeles. Ketchel was a rare sort of a bird—a man who didn't recognize the possibility of defeat. Ketchel was so constituted that he couldn't feel fear. The chance of losing a title meant nothing to him, and he felt in his heart that he could beat any man he fought. So when he met Papke again a few months later, Ketchel entered the ring with all the confidence in the world and Papke, the champion, was nervous and on edge.

Ketchel whipped him. But among all the fighting men I've ever known, Ketchel, Dempsey and Fitzsimmons were unique in having this feeling of absolute invincibility. It gave them fighting strength and an edge over all opponents.

A Double Comeback.

In the welter class, Jack Britton is notable for having rewon a lost world's championship twice. Britton is a cocky, self-confident fighter, and very skillful. He has made a remarkable record in the ring and has held the championship long after the time he might have been expected to crack.

His closest rival was Kid Lewis. Lewis was many years younger than Britton when he beat Jack and took the championship away.

He held it for some time, meeting Britton in a number of no-decision bouts. It seemed that age was "grabbing" Britton, as Joe Gans used to say. But Jack came back unexpectedly, knocking out Lewis. After that he beat Lewis again easily.

A funny thing—Lewis seemed to grow old and lose his fighting form, while Jack Britton is still as youthful as ever in the ring, and delivers the goods in championship style when all of the men he used to fight in his early days have long retired or been pounded into oblivion.

Lewis "came back" once by beating Britton and retrieving the title, but that was a long time ago, and he soon lost it again. Still, he classifies as one of the few champions who have been beaten and have fought their way to the top again.

These Never "Came Back."

Such great welters as Joe Walcott, Rube Ferns, Matty Mathews, Mysterious Billy Smith and Honey Mellody were through with the title when they lost it.

No lightweight ever won back a lost championship. McAuliffe had the good sense to retire when Carney of England outfought him, although he didn't lose the title, crowd breaking down the ring and the affair ending without going to a finish, as fights did in the London Prize Ring days.

Lavigne lost to Erne and never was the same great fighter again. But losing to Erne on a decision isn't what finished Lavigne. His stout heart broke when he tried to take the welter title from Mysterious Billy Smith in San Francisco, and was knocked out.

Erne killed himself off as champion by fighting at various weights. He made 126 pounds for Terrible Terry McGovern, burned up his vitality with the pounds he sweated out in training and was knocked out.

Later he fought Welter Champion Ferns and was knocked out. And still later Gans took the title in a punch at Fort Erie.

That finished one of the cleverest boxers who ever held the lightweight championship.

Making Weight Beat Gans.

Gans burned himself out by making 133 pounds ringside in his fighting trunks and shoes, for Nelson at Goldfield and when he met Nelson again, and lost, he hadn't the vitality to come back in a return match.

Nelson was an iron man for years. The defeat by Wolgast, in which he was hammered helpless while still on his feet in over 40 rounds of desperate fighting, finished him.

Wolgast wasn't much good after losing to Ritchie, and Ritchie might have come back and beaten Walsh, who took the title on a close decision in England, but was unfortunate in having to make his attempt against Henry Leonard, one of the greatest little men that ever wore the crown.

In the featherweight class, Dixon went down for good when McGovern beat him, and none of his successors ever won back a lost title.

The greatest bantams, Harry Forbes, Frankie Neil, Joe Bowker and Kid Williams, all failed to recover lost world honors.

Herman has shown himself to be a remarkable little fighting man. After losing to Lynch he went to England and knocked out Jimmy Wilde, returned and won many good fights. He fought much harder trying to "come back" than when he was champion. If he keeps up his hard fighting streak he'll be one of the most popular little men his class ever knew.

Scandinavians Beaten in Doubles, Giving Antipodeans Necessary Three Wins.

CLEVELAND, O., Aug. 13.—The Australian team defeated the Danish team in the Davis cup doubles preliminaries here this afternoon in straight sets 6—3, 6—, and 6—2.

This result eliminates the Danish team and gives the Australians the right to meet the winners of the India-Japanese matches.

CHICAGO, Aug. 13.—Forty negro tennis stars, who began play yesterday for the Midwest championships, were scheduled to play the second rounds today. Players from Kansas City, St. Louis, Columbus, O.; Dayton, New Orleans and Washington are entered in the tournament. Two players also represent the Philippines.

SEABRIGHT, N. J., Aug. 13.—Mrs. Molla Bjurstedt Mallory, national woman champion, today defeated Miss Eleanor Goss, New York, in the final of the Seabright Lawn Tennis and Cricket Club singles, 8—6, 6—3.

Killefer Protests Game.

By the Associated Press.

PITTSBURG, Aug. 13.—Manager Killefer of the Chicago Cubs has protested the second game played here with the Pirates in a double-header, Thursday. Killefer claimed that had a foul fly been hit in the general direction of the Pirate dugout during the eleventh inning of the game, it would have been impossible to make the catch, as park employes were there unrolling a tarpaulin, preparatory to laying it over the home plate.

Hornsby Holding To Batting Lead; Tobin Now Third

St. Louis Clubs Have Eight Players Batting Up With the League Leaders.

Ruth Gets 44th Homer And Plays Brilliant Game in the Outfield

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Aug. 13.—Babe Ruth not only hit his forty-fourth home run of the season in yesterday's game between the New York and Philadelphia American League clubs, but performed brilliantly in the field.

In the first inning, he caught Johnny Walker's fly.

In the fourth he executed a spectular running catch of Tilly Walker's short, but high fly, back of shortstop.

In the sixth he backed against the wall after a sprint to his right, and got a long drive by Hasty.

Clarence Twombly, who has been alternating between playing the outfield for the Cubs and acting as premier pinch hitter, is closing the gap between himself and Rogers Hornsby, the St. Louis star, for batting honors in the National League, according to averages released today, and which include games of last Wednesday. The Chicagoan tacked on five more points to his batting average and is the runner-up to Hornsby, with an average of .371. The St. Louis keystone guardian dropped five points, but continues to top the list with an average of .410. "Pep" Young of New York is third with .360.

Kelly Is Going Some.

George Kelly of the Giants cracked out his nineteenth homer during the past week and is leading the circuit drive hitters, his closest rivals being Hornsby and McHenry of St. Louis, each of whom has 15.

Frisch of New York stole three bases since the compilation of the previous figures and is showing the way to the base stealers with 34 thefts.

Hornsby broke the tie which he shared with Frisch for runs scored and is leading this department. He registered 89 times and has a total base record of 267, which includes 31 doubles, 13 triples and 15 homers.

Other leading batters: Cutshaw, Pittsburg, .351; McHenry, St. Louis, .346; Nicholson, Boston, .346; Cruise, Boston, .342; Roush, Cincinnati, .339; Fournier, St. Louis, .338; Meusel, New York, .335; Mann, St. Louis, .335; Schmandt, Brooklyn, .335.

Ruth Ahead of Record.

Babe Ruth, the home-run king, is ahead of his 1920 circuit drive record. The Yankee slugger has crashed out his forty-fourth homer. Ruth has only to make 11 more to surpass his record. He made five during the past week. In addition to this, Ruth has attained a mark of 304 for total bases, which, besides his four-ply blows, included 27 doubles and eight triples. He also has scored 117 runs for his club.

Heilmann Loses Ground.

Harry Heilmann, the Detroit slugging outfielder, struck a slump in his batting, and although he continues to top the players who have participated in 60 or more games, his average went from .423 to .417. Ty Cobb, his manager, who is the runner-up, also slumped, his mark being .387. Tobin of St. Louis, on the other hand, fared well with the willow and moved up to third position with an average of .371, with Ruth next with an average of .369, two points in front of Tris Speaker, who dropped from third place. Speaker's mark is .367.

S. Harris of Washington failed to add to his string of stolen bases, and is showing the way with 20 thefts.

Other leading batters: Flagstead, Detroit, .358; Sisler, St. Louis, .356; Williams, St. Louis, .353; Severeid, St. Louis, .348; E. Collins, Chicago, .341.

SWIMMING TITLES TO BE DECIDED AT DETROIT

DETROIT, Mich., Aug. 13.—One national and three central A. A. U. championships feature the program of the swimming meet at the Detroit Boat Club, here this afternoon. Entries for the National A. A. U. fancy diving championship, include E. Fancke, New York Athletic Club; A. W. Hartung, Chicago; William Town, Arthur Matsu and Carl Myers of Cleveland and several Detroiters.

SPORT BRIEFS.

New York—Jim Barnes, American National open golf champion, and Jock Hutchison, winner of the British open championship, will meet here in a 36-hole match on Labor day.

Milwaukee—Dennis O'Keefe, Chicago welterweight boxer, easily outpointed Tommy Noar, a local boy, in 10 rounds, sporting writers agreed.

Boston—Dan Dowd of Boston scored a technical knockout over Ted Jimieson of Milwaukee when Jamieson quit in the eighth round of a scheduled 10-round bout, saying he had hurt his left hand.

Okmulgee, Ok.—"Red" Thomas, center fielder for the Henryetta Western Association Club, was sold to the Chicago Nationals, it was learned. He will not report until the end of the season.

Chicago—The Chicago Firemen won the third and last game of a series here with the New York Firemen, the score at the end of 11 innings being 6 to 4.

Jumping Player Jumps Back.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Aug. 13.—Artie Butler, second baseman of the local American Association club, who jumped the team several weeks ago, has, at his own request, been reinstated and will report tomorrow, George Muehlebach, club president, announced today. When Butler left here he was the league's leading batter.

STOCKS ADVANCE IN SMALL MARKET AND THEN REACT

Railroad Shares Practically Neglected — Strength Is Shown in Mexican Petroleum and U. S. Steel at Week-End Session.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Aug. 13.—The Evening Post in its copyrighted financial review today, says:

"The action of the stock market in today's short session proved quite conclusively that the statement given out late yesterday on behalf of the bankers dealing with the Mercantile Bank of the Americas situation had been thoroughly discounted by the advance in stocks on Friday. Only for a few minutes this morning did it appear as if the recovery would be carried further. Stocks advanced fractionally without any great volume of trading, but subsequently forfeited most of the early gains. The fact that the general list of industrials was not unsettled by further selling of, and extreme weakness in United States Rubber and Central Leather, was probably due to hesitancy on the part of shorts to enter into any large commitments on the eve of a trading holiday. Railroads were practically neglected, and just barely held their ground. Strength was shown in Mexican Petroleum and United States Steel.

"The same condition of dullness was seen in other markets, notably in cotton and grain. In the early dealings cotton moved up 10 to 15 points, but yielded later because there seemed to be little responsive buying power. Wheat acted in a similar manner, advancing three-quarters in the first hour, but forfeiting this gain before the close.

"Further liquidation of loans was the outstanding feaure of an otherwise colorless weekly statement of the Clearing House Banks. That item was brought down $47,246,000 while net demand deposits showed an increase of $11,231,000. The loss of member banks reserve at the Federal Reserve Bank was insignificant, amounting to only $2,729,000. The net result of changes in the items which determine the banks' reserve position was a loss of $3,074,840 in surplus, bringing that item down to $15,803,950."

Wall Street News and Comment —SPECIAL DAILY—

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Aug. 13.—Prices started in higher on the Stock Exchange this morning in response to the announcement made after the close yesterday concerning the Mercantile Bank of the Americas.

What little buying there was, however, quickly ran its course. The early gains amounted to a half point or so, then the familiar selling broke out in various industrial stocks and this put a stop to the recovery. Central Leathers were again forced down to new low prices. Continental Can broke badly, and the United States Rubber shares fell sharply, the weakness in the first preferred being more notable even than the heavy selling of the common.

The weakness in these industrials unsettled more or less the general market, but did not bring out any important selling. Tarding continued dull and the firmness of the steel and rail shares was a noticeable feature as it has been on the two previous days.

The wheat market was helped by the reduction brought about in freight rates on export grain. There was no variation of consequence in the foreign exchanges.

The Bond Market.

In today's bond market there was not much activity and very little feature. The prompt success attending the $3,000,000 offering of the Province of Saskatchewan, six-year 6 per cent bonds attracted increasing attention to the Canadian provincial group in general. The market for these bonds has been very strong all week, with prices up generally about 1¼ points. Province of Ontario 4s of 1926 are 83 bid, offered 87. Manitoba 6s of 1925 and the 6s of 1930 are both 91 bid, while 91¼ is bid for the 6s of 1931. The Saskatchewan bonds were put out at 92⅞ to yield 7½ per cent. This is a decided improvement as compared with three weeks ago, which the same securities were selling on a 7.75 to 7.90 per cent basis.

United States Rubber issues were not affected by the extreme weakness in the stocks of the company. On the contrary the 7½s were stronger; they sold at 101¼, as against 100½ yesterday. Westinghouse 7s were better, crossing 101 again as against 100¾ at last night's close. Heavy selling continued in the Chile Copper 6s, carrying them down almost another point. They were off nearly 2 points from yesterday morning. Duquesne Light 6s were somewhat lower and so were Virginia-Carolina Chemical 7½s.

The Government and Railway groups were steady, with little change in prices. Liberty Bonds were a trifle up. French 8s at 100 and 7½s at 95⅝ were unchanged. Brazil 8s were a shade easier. The feature in the railway list was the continued demand for the Hill road issues around their higher prices. Burlington 6½s were taken as offered at 101, and the Northern Pacific refunding 6s sold at 101¼, both representing substantially top figures.

COTTON MEETS LIQUIDATION AFTER UPTURN AT START

NEW YORK, Aug. 13.—The cotton market opened steady at an advance of 8 to 13 points on favorable week-end reviews of the goods trade and scattered buying, which included a moderate demand from houses with continental connections. There was also covering, but the demand seemed to be quite readily supplied around 13.75c for December and prices turned easier after the call under local spot house selling and liquidation. December sold off to 13.60c, with other months also easing off to about last night's closing. It is reported that some of the larger New England mills are now employing more people on full time than at any time previously since the war.

The report from the Census Bureau showing mill consumption of only 410,120 bales for July against 525,489 last year was less favorable than expected and led to some scattered selling. There was also increased Southern selling which sent October off to 13.18c and December to 13.60c and the close was barely steady at 4 points decline to 2 advance.

Cotton futures closed barely steady; Oct., 13.18c; Dec., 13.60c; Jan., 13.63c; March, 13.83c; May, 13.94c.

July Cotton Consumption.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 13.—Cotton consumed during July amounted to 410,120 bales of lint and 50,019 bales of linters, compared with 525,489 of lint and 37,575 of linters in July last year, the Census Bureau announced today.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 13.—Consumption for the 12 months ending July 31, the cotton year, amounted to 4,887,893 bales of lint and 513,587 of linters, compared with 6,419,734 of lint and 342,473 of linters.

Cotton on hand July 31, in consuming establishments was 1,115,847 bales of lint and 202,252 of linters, compared with 1,358,147 of lint and 277,218 of linters so held a year ago, and in public storage and at compresses 3,724,512 bales of lint and 235,104 of linters, compared with 2055 of lint and 382,432 of linters so held a year ago.

Imports for July were 3342 bales, and for the year 226,321 bales, compared with 37,575 for July a year ago, and 700,214 for last year.

Exports amounted to 527,323 bales for July, including 3327 bales of linters, compared with 211,841, including 3375 of linters in July a year ago. For the 12 months, exports totaled 5,724,584 bales, including 51,132 bales of linters, compared with 6,598,347, including 53,021 linters the previous year.

Cotton spindles active during July numbered 32,446,281, compared with 34,686,794 in July last year.

Statistics for cotton-growing states follow:

Consumed during July 245,425 bales, compared with 295,111 a year ago, and for the 12 months, 2,997,675 bales, compared with 3,582,919 bales.

Cotton on hand July 31, in consuming establishments was 460,139 bales, compared with 612,793 a year ago, and in public storage and at compresses 3,724,512 bales, compared with 1,692,683 a year ago.

Cotton spindles active during July numbered 14,442,782, compared with 15,071,505 in July last year.

New Orleans Spot Cotton.

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 13.—Spot cotton quiet and unchanged. Sales on the spot 225 bales; to arrive 152. Low middling 10.38; middling, 12.13; good middling 13.13. Receipts and stock blank.

New Orleans Cotton Lower.

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 13.—The early trading in cotton brought narrow fluctuations, the more active months standing 6 to 7 points under yesterday's close soon after the opening, but they were 3 to 6 points higher than yesterday's final prices at the end of the first hour of business. Texas reported more or less rain and this caused selling, but the soft spot that resulted tempted new buying almost immediately.

The census bureau report of 410,120 bales of cotton consumed by American mills during July against 461,656 during June was considered disappointing and resulted in sufficient selling to put prices back to about the lowest levels again. Toward the close the trading months were at net losses of 2 to 3 points.

Louisiana Crops Larger.

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 13.—A production of 15,700,000 bushels of rice and 3,338,569 tons of sugar cane and 231,290 short tons of sugar, is forecast for Louisiana this season, according to conditions on Aug. 1 as announced by Lionel L. Janes, agricultural statistican of the Federal Department of Agriculture. The rice yield in 1920 was 25,200,000 bushels and sugar production, 169,127 short tons.

Dry Goods Market.

NEW YORK, Aug. 13.—Cotton goods yesterday were in steady demand, except in the cotton duck and wide specialty divisions. Cotton yarns held firm, with sales moderate. Men's wear woolens were ordered steadily for spring. Silk markets were fore active. Knit goods in moderate call and burlaps steadier.

HOG MARKET IS QUIET DESPITE LIGHT SUPPLY

NATIONAL STOCKYARDS, Ill., Aug. 13.—Today's estimated receipts: Cattle and calves, 150; hogs, 1600; sheep, none; horses and mules, none.

CATTLE—Receipts were light today and there were not enough sales made to justify a change in price quotations. Receipts for the week were liberal in volume and quality plain. Best corn-fed steers and yearlings found ready sale each day and closed 25c to 50c higher. Other grades of killing cattle finish steady to a shade lower.

HOGS—Saturday hog market was very quiet, despite an extremely light supply, the estimate calling for only 1600; most of the sales were of lightweight shippers and butchers and ranged from $11 to $11.15, the latter price the top. General market a dime higher. No medium or strong weights were sold, as none of the big packers were in the market. Close was quiet, with a good proportion of the run unsold.

SHEEP—Receipts were nil and there was no life to the Saturday sheep and lamb market. Declines of the week have lowered lambs 50c to $1, while sheep have taken a slump of 50c. Quote best lambs $8.50@9; culls, $3@5; fat sheep, $3@4; canners, 75c, and choppers and bucks, $1.50@2.

HORSES AND MULES—Receipts were nil today and the market nominal. Consignments on commission for the week total 1000 head, the market for which averaged near steady in virtually all departments.

WHEAT MARKET IS STEADY IN TRADING AT CHICAGO

CHICAGO, Aug. 13.—Wheat again displayed steadiness in price today. There was some buying on the reports of a light frost at Moose Jaw and also some buying of futures credited to Eastern accounts. Profit-taking sales and hedging about balanced these, however. Opening quotations, which varied from unchanged figures to ⅛c higher, with September $1.23¼ to $1.23⅝ and December at $1.25⅛ to $1.26, were followed by a slight setback and then by a slight rally to the opening figures.

In the last half hour the market rallied on reports of frosts in the Northwest. The close was steady, ¼@⅝c net higher, with September at $1.24⅛ to $1.24½ and December at $1.26 to $1.26⅛.

Corn displayed weakness mainly through lack of support. After opening ⅛c decline with September at 56½c and 56⅝c, the market sagged and gave no early indication of rallying.

Offerings were liberal and the market closed slow, a shade net lower with September at 56⅝@56⅝c.

Oats were dull, opening unchanged to ⅛c advance with September at 36c to 36⅛c, but later sagged all around, September dropping below 36c for the first time this year. Trading was light.

Provisions were steady.

GIRL TWICE BRAVES NIAGARA RIVER TO SAVE TWO CHUMS

Thrilling Rescues Occur Within Few Minutes of Each Other Above Horseshoe Falls.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Aug. 13.—Twice yesterday afternoon in the space of a few minutes Phyllis Perry of Chippewa, Ont., a slender schoolgirl of 15, braved the angry waters of the Niagara River above the Horseshoe Falls to rescue chums from certain death.

With Wilma and Cora Baldry, sisters, Miss Perry was camping on the river bank. Daily the three swam together, keeping close to the shore and out of the pull of the rapids. Yesterday Wilma was overcome, and before she could make shore was carried out into the current.

Cora, 12, was with Wilma at the time, but regained the shore. When her older sister called for help she plunged back into the water and attempted to tow the heavier girl toward the shore, but was unsuccessful. Then she, too, called for assistance.

Miss Perry, hearing the call, swam to the side of the elder girl and towed her to shore. Then she went to the assistance of Cora, who, exhausted by the fight to save her sister, was going down the second time.

MICHIGAN STATE TROOPERS TO WATCH FOR RUM RUNNERS

By the Associated Press.

DETROIT, Mich., Aug. 13.—Seventy-five members of the State constabulary arrived here from Lansing last night for patrol duty on American shores to guard against "rum runners." The troopers, armed with rifles, will begin patrolling the waters in motor boats tomorrow morning.

Their importation followed reports that a widespread movement was on foot to flood the United States with intoxicants from nearby Canadian towns, following the court ruling in Windsor that the Ontario "dry" act does not prohibit their export.

With the arrival of the troopers, Charles P. Cameau, Detroit agent of the Michigan Public Safety Commission, asserted that he intended to "get every bottle of beer and whisky that is brought over" from Canada.

CURB TRADE IS DULL AND CHANGES SMALL

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Aug. 13.—Business on the New York curb market was extremely small, with price changes confined to narrow limits. The market generally was steady, but without special feature in any section, although a moderate suply appeared in Car Light and Power, resulting in a slight decline. There was a good inquiry in the motor issues for H. F. Holbrook, Inc.

The market for the oil shares generally was held in comparative restraint, because of a disposition to wait for developments in the petroleum industry.

Producers and Refiners sold off slightly, but there was a good demand in evidence on the decline. Some of the other shares in this department made moderate gains, among them Guffey-Gillespie. Salt Creek and Skelly Oil were slightly easier. Standard Oils were quiet, with only a few transactions recorded at unchanged prices.

Bonds were les active, with most of the business confined to only a few issues. Western Union 6½s were up a small fraction.

9 CENTS AN HOUR CUT FOR SINGLE TRACK CAR EMPLOYES

East St. Louis & Suburban Announces Reduction Retroactive to Aug. 1—50 Men Affected.

Officers of the East St. Louis & Suburban Railway Co., and other single-track street car lines, whose employes are members of Local No. 805, Amalgamated Association of Street and Elecric Railway Employes, yesterday notified officers of the local that a wage cut of 9 cents an hour, retroactive as to Aug. 1, would be made when the employes receive their semimonthly pay next week.

The employes have been receiving 60 cents an hour since May 1, 1920, and a new wage scale, retroactive as to May 1, 1921, is under consideration. The company and the local have each selected a member of the board of arbitration to decide upon the wage award, but they have been unable to select the neutral member of the board.

W. H. Sawyer, president of the street car company, in his letter to officers of the local said that should the wage award be in excess of 51 cents an hour, the men will receive the difference due them, as retroactive to May 1, and if the wage award is less than 60 cents an hour, the company will collect from the men the amount that may be due. The change affects about 50 employes.

HEAD OF BALDWIN LOCOMOTIVE FIRM HAS PRAISE FOR MEXICO

Samuel Matthews Vauclain of Rosemont, Pa., president of the Baldwin Locomotive Works at Philadelphia, stopped in St. Louis today on his return from Mexico City to Philadelphia, to inspect the coke plant of the St. Louis Coke and Chemical Co. at Granite City. He was met at Hotel Jefferson and taken across the river by Clarence Howard, president of the Commonwealth Steel Co., and William B. Dickson of New York, vice president of the Midvale Steel and Ordnance Co. He departed for Philadelphia at noon.

Vauclain was full of praise for industrial prospects in Mexico. He found everywhere in that country a fervid effort at progress and declared the country abounded with opportunities for manufacturing projects.

"I was particularly impressed with the fine condition of the railroad roadbeds of Mexico," said Vauclain. "They are in much better condition than in the southwestern part of the United States. Between St. Louis and Laredo the roadbeds are in fairly good condition, but the Mexican roadbeds, between Laredo and Mexico City, surpass those between Larado and St. Louis."

GREAT THRONG AT FUNERAL OF CHIEF OF BLACK HAND FOES

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch.

NAPLES, Aug. 13.—Despite the tropical heat, a great throng witnessed the funeral of Alberto Osafeo yesterday, whose body, embalmed in New York, reached here aboard the steamship Pasaro. To New Yorkers Alberto was only an Italian immigrant, killed in Mulberry street last winter. To Naples he was one of the greatest chiefs of the Camorra and head of Pelligrini gang, who were the sworn foes of the black handers in New York's Italian underworld.

Alberto, for whose funeral all the flower stores sold out their stocks today, belonged to the lowest stratum of Naples society. Without a penny he sailed for New York eight years ago, when he became leader of the Pelligrinis, levied Camorra blackmail upon most of the Italians, and soon before his death retired worth $500,000. But while head of the Pelligrini gang, Alberto killed eight members of the rival black hand band, which finally killed him.

His widow, son and brother accompanied his body on the Pesaro.

TO ASK FOR CUT IN STEEL RATES

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Aug. 13.—The Interstate Commerce Commission will be asked in a few days to permit a 25 per cent freight rate reduction, Sept. 1, on export shipments of iron and steel moving through Atlantic ports. This was agreed upon at a conference yesterday between representatives of Eastern shippers of iron and steel and the traffic executives' committee of the Trunk Line Association.

Trade competition in foreign fields, chiefly England and Belgium, necessitated reduced transportation costs, the iron and steel shippers represented. Before the application is forwarded to Washington the schedules will be checked up with those of the railroads represented in the Western Freight Association, which were said to have a corresponding agreement with Western shippers of iron and steel.

POLICE ITEMS

FRANK HUNTER, 35 YEARS OLD, OF South Twenty-third street, and John Cheatham, 28, of 2947 Laclede avenue, negroes, arrested yesterday by Detective Sergeant Calahan, in charge of negro detectives, were identified last night, the police say, by Mrs. Gertrude Moore of 2910 Hickory street, one of several women who have been swindled lately by two negroes using the ancient "found pocketbook game. She was robbed of $8 by the pair, she said, last week. The prisoners deny any connection with the swindles.

G. J. BROWN, 29 YEARS OLD, OF 3738 Washington avenue, a printer, and Samuel Portis, 47, of 1802A Rutger street, were arrested at 10 o'clock last night at Fifteenth street and Clark avenue, when policemen said they found a revolver in Brown's pocket. Portis, the police reported, was being assisted by Brown. Brown explained he had offered to take his friend, Portis, home and put the revolver in his pocket for protection.

The men told Capt. Hannegan they were on their way home from the harvest fields and were carrying the weapons for self-protection.

RAILROAD CLERKS TO VOTE ON REDUCED PAY QUESTION

200,000 Strike Ballots Sent Out to Get Views on Labor Board's Decision.

By the Associated Press.

CINCINNATI, Aug. 13.—More than 200,000 strike ballots have been sent out from the international headquarters in Cincinnati of the Brotherhood of Railway Clerks, freight handlers, express and station employes on which the membership and those unaffiliated employes who care to do so will vote whether they are in favor of accepting the wage reduction ordered by the Railroad Labor Board in a recent decision.

All ballots are returnable by Sept. 30, through general chairmen of system boards of adjustment.

Accompanying the ballots is a four-page letter signed by Grand President E. H. Fitzgerald, in which he reviews all wage proceedings since the passage of the Cummins-Esch transportation act.

"When the votes have been tabulated the grand president will advise the chief executives of the 16 railroad labor organizations how far this brotherhood is ready to co-operate."

MISSIONARY EXPLAINS ACTION IN CLASSIFYING UNITARIANS

Says He Put Them in Separate List Because They Do Not Accept Divinity of Christ.

By the Associated Press.

TOKIO, Aug. 12.—Following recent publication of letters from a number of foreigners condemning the action of the Federation of Missions in excluding Unitarians from its published list of Christian Missions, Dr. A. B. Berry, American Methodist missionary in Japan, has made public a statement saying he wished to clarify the action of the federation.

Dr. Berry's statement said he did not exclude Unitarians from the book "The Christian Movement," in which the list appears, but that he divided the missions into two classes. In the regular list, the statement said, were placed the missions of churches which believed in the deity of Christ and in a supplementary list was placed the mission which does not accept the divinity of Christ.

The action, the State continues, does not imply anything in regard to the Christian character of Dr. Clay Maccauley, founder of the Unitarian mission in Japan, who is now in America, nor to his successor, but implies the judgment of the federation, that the Unitarian mission was not a Christian mission in the full sense of that term.

The letters of protest highly praised Dr. Maccauley's 30 years of work among the Japanese people and asked how the Japanese will feel when they see missionaries declare by implication that the distinguished former missionary, who was honored and loved by all classes of Japanese, was not a Christian and was an imposter in claiming to be one.

MIAMI, Fla., Aug. 13.—Edward F. White was released from jail yesterday when a Coroner's jury decided Maud Gilbert, his companion on a midnight automobile ride Wednesday, met accidental death by drowning. White told the jury that the girl was driving the car when it leaped into the canal, eight miles west of here. A physician testified that water in her lungs indicated drowning. The body will be sent to her former home in Bridgeport, Conn.

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN.—Please call and see the want ad manager. He will appreciate your trouble and act on your suggestions.

WM. V. C.—Write to the Secretary of State, Statehouse, Baton Rouge, Louisiana, and you will find out how to apply for that State's soldiers' bonus.

F. P.—Try the following for cementing asbestos to the furnace pipes: Ground asbestos mixed with a solution of sodium silicate. This mixture makes a cement which will resist a high degree of temperature.

A. B. C.—The tunnel of St. Louis was excavated and it took a good deal of bracing to keep buildings on each side from falling into the opening. It was an immense undertaking for its day. It is a little short of a mile in length. Exactly the distance is 4880 feet. In the construction, streets were excavated from curb to curb. Massive side walls of masonry were laid. Through the center of the tunnel is a third wall. Practically, the tunnel is double. Each half is 14 feet wide, except at curves where the width is increased to 15 feet. Heavy brick arches span the space from side walls to center wall. They are of sufficient strength to support the street above and the traffic thereon. The interior crown of the arch is 6 feet 6 inches above the railroad track. To create the tunnel it was necessary to remove 215,000 cubic yards of earth. The stone masonry laid was 50,000 cubic yards. The brick used in the arches numbered 13,000,000. The original contractors, a St. Louis firm, Strainka & Co., gave up after several months' work in the winter of 1872-73. An Allegheny man, James Andrews, completed the tunnel in 15 months. The cost was about $30,000,000. Like the bridge, the tunnel, which was built by a separate company was sold under foreclosure, and the company was wiped out. The new company organized with a capital of $1,250,000, and leased the tunnel on an agreement which provided for 6 per cent on the capital and an allowance of $2500 a year for offices and organization expenses.

LEGAL INFORMATION.

(Prepared by a Member of the St. Louis Bar Association.)

C. I. F. P.—A girl who is 17 years old can go to an evening school if she is employed during the day.

A RENTER.—The notice to vacate which you received several days before your rent was due, is legal.

ANXIOUS GOB.—A sailor dishonorably discharged from the service is not entitled to the State bonus just passed.

MARY X.—Your husband's signature is necessary when you sell your real estate, even though it is in your name only.

UNSIGNED.—We would have to see the contract you made when buying your furniture before we can advise you intelligently.

B. R.—You might apply for a divorce in Missouri after you have lived here a year if you have any real grounds for it, even though your wife is in the insane asylum.

A LOVE OF P.—Your wife from whom you are not divorced, can claim part of the money which you give your father to buy property.

H. O. L.—The real estate agent can collect his commission from you for selling your property, unless you can prove it was sold on Sunday.

MABLE.—The grounds you give would not be enough to offer in securing a divorce, since you condoned your husband's faults by "making up" with him.

WM. J.—We think the landlord is not entitled to collect from you at this time, which you say has been five years, unless you had a written contract to vacate at a certain time.

G. B. W.—The age limit for obtaining a fishing license in Missouri is 21 years if a resident of the State. There is no special license for using trot lines and seines in Missouri, but it is unlawful to use these except in some of the large rivers, without permission of owners of the land and then you can only use them in a limited way.

MEDICAL QUESTIONS.

(Answers prepared by a physician of authority. Health and sanitation questions of public interest only will be considered. Diagnoses or treatment of individual cases will not be given. Questions that cannot be publicly discussed, if showing evidences of sincerity, will be answered when accompanied by stamped envelope.)

P.-D. READER.—Woman aged 40 repeat your question enclosing a stamped addressed envelope.

K. J. E.—In medical doses, potassium nitrate (saltpeter) is not harmful to the normal stomach. The dose is 8 grains.

FLORENCE.—Repeat your question, inclosing stamped addressed envelope, and we will give you the information you wish.

E. H.—You should consult an ear specialist. If unable to pay a private physician, apply at the clinic, Scott avenue and Duncan, or Grand and Carolina.

ANNA.—We think a good tonic as any is the tincture of chloride of iron in 10-drop doses in water three times a day. It should be taken through a glass tube and the teeth should be cleaned after each dose.

ANXIOUS.—(1) Sodium bromide would fulfill the purpose you mention, taken in doses of 15 grains three or four times a day. The effect would be transient, however, and disappear on withdrawal of the remedy. (2) About once a week.

BUSTER R.—We judge from your statement that you are an excessive smoker. It would affect your speech in two ways. By creating a condition of nervousness, or by creating an inflammatory condition about the vocal cords. We understand your ability to speak is not impaired, so probably the trouble is nervousness. This may or may not be due to your smoking. Would advise you to stop your smoking for a while or entirely. If in a reasonable time you do not improve have a thorough physical examination made.

NEW AUTO SIGNAL ORDINANCE PROBABLE

Safety Council to Present Bill to Board of Aldermen in October.

The Executive Committee of the Safety Council yesterday authorized the special committee considering automobile driving signals to prepare and submit to the Board of Aldermen when it reconvenes in October a proposed ordinance amplifying the recently enacted State law on signals. In view of the new State law it was deemed impracticable to attempt the formulation of special signals for St. Louis, which might have made arm signals unnecessary.

The State law provides, under certain conditions, for mechanical signals for closed cars. W. L. Patterson, statistician of the Safety Council, a mechanical engineer, said he had investigated 98 types of mechanical signals and had found only one to be satisfactory. It was said that the Municipal Department of Streets and Sewers, however, had approved several types. The Safety Council will not recommend any particular type save any that are "approved."

State Law on Signals.

An excerpt from the State law follows:

"A driver when stopping, or when checking the speed of his vehicle, if the movement of other vehicles may reasonably be affected by such checking, shall extend his arm in a horizontal position, so that the same may be seen in the rear of his vehicle.

"A driver intending to turn to the right shall extend his arm at an angle above the horizontal. A driver intending to turn to the left shall extend his arm at an angle below the horizontal.

"If a motor vehicle is equipped with a (proper) mechanical or electrical signaling device the arm signals need not be given. All inclosed motor vehicles or those so constructed and equipped that the arm signals cannot be given, or seen from the rear (trucks), and which are owned by residents of municipalities of more than 10,000 population, shall be equipped with a mechanical or electrical signaling device."

Draft of Proposed Ordinance.

The Safety Council's special committee submitted a draft of an ordinance which it probably will seek to have passed by the Board of Aldermen, follows: "Any signal indicating a change of movement of a car shall be given before such change is begun. A signal, if by hand, shall be by the full length of the forearm, extended beyond the body of the car. If the car is so built as to prevent the arm signal from being seen from the rear, then the provisions of the State law in regard to mechanical signals shall be followed."

The chief effect of this would be to assure that arm signals are visible by requiring the full extension of forearms. It will be noted that the State law would require mechanical signals only on those closed cars in this part of Missouri which are owned by St. Louisans.

PRISONER SAID TO ADMIT HE IS MISSING OREGON DENTIST

Man Held at Calgary Believed to Be Dr. R. M. Brumfield, Wanted for Murder.

By the Associated Press.

CALGARY, Alta., Aug. 12.—Police here yesterday arrested a man who, after questioning, said he was Dr. R. M. Brumfield, Roseburg, Ore., dentist, wanted in his home city for the murder of Dennis Russell, a laborer. Brumfield was arrested on a murder warrant and said he would not fight extradition.

At first the man gave his name as Norman Whitney, but later admitted, according to the police, that he was Brumfield.

CONDUCTOR INJURED IN FIGHT

Alleged to Have Been Struck With Revolver by Watchman.

Frank Robinson, 42 years old, of 1900 Hickory street, a licensed private watchman for a box company, was arrested and suspended at 5:40 p. m. yesterday following a row on a Park avenue car in which the watchman is said to have assaulted one conductor with his revolver butt and to have snapped the weapon at another conductor.

Opal C. Batts, 32, of 3232 Rutger street, conductor on the front car, was taken to the city hospital after the fight. Doctors said he had a probable fracture of the skull. George Tousey, conductor of the trailer, was uninjured. He said a revolver was snapped in his face.

Robinson boarded the car, on his way to work, at Eighteenth and Gratiot streets. At Clark avenue he asked Batts for a transfer. Batts told him he had "flashed" his badge when he boarded the car and added that if he wanted a transfer he would have to pay fare. Robinson insisted he had paid fare and at Washington avenue and Eighteenth street Robinson is said to have drawn his revolver, hitting Batts on the head. Tousey rushed to Batts' assistance.

MAN'S SKULL FRACTURED IN ATTACK AS HE LEAVES WORK

William Elkins, 37 years old, of 3129 South Broadway, a boiler maker, suffered a fractured skull and fractures of several ribs at 5 p. m. yesterday when he was attacked at Nebraska avenue and Chippewa street by five men.

Elkins told the police he was employed usually at the Missouri Boiler and Sheet Iron Works, but had been working lately at the Rohan Boiler Works at the end of Marceau street, where a strike is in progress. He had been taken to the corner in an automobile under protection and had left the machine to take a street car when the assault occurred. He said he was knocked down and kicked. He was taken to the city hospital. His assailants escaped.

Camels are made for Men who Think for Themselves

Such folks know real quality—and DEMAND it.

They prefer Camels because Camels give them the smoothest, mellowest smoke they can buy—because they love the mild, rich flavor of choicest tobaccos, perfectly blended—and because Camels leave NO CIGARETTY AFTERTASTE.

Like every man who does his own thinking, you want fine tobacco in your cigarettes. You'll find it in Camels.

And, mind you, no flashy package just for show. No extra wrappers! No costly frills. These things don't improve the smoke any more than premiums or coupons.

But QUALITY! Listen! That's CAMELS!

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

Vivisection as It Is.
To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

"VIVISECTION," says Marie Graves in a letter to the People's Column, "is a thing which everyone should know about." One does not fully realize the forceful truth of this statement until reading the rest of Marie's letter. If, for instance, Marie had known how vivisection is actually practiced, she would never have been guilty of such a bundle of glaring misstatements, extravagant descriptions of non-existent atrocities or of such a sweeping libel against the medical profession.

For the benefit of Marie and those who may have been taken in by her unbalanced assertions, it may be well to describe the simple practice of vivisection as now practiced. The dog or other animal intended for vivisection is well treated and well fed prior to the operation. At the time set it is given an anesthetic, and the desired operation is performed. When it is ended the strength of the anesthetic is increased and the animal dies without ever recovering consciousness or suffering any pain.

I do not understand the sort of mewling sentimentality that weeps over the bodies of vivisected animals, while the world is filled to overflowing with agonizing humanity. I do not understand it, and I have little patience with it. Nor am I in any way connected with the medical profession. This is the sort of cheap and maudlin mawkishness that has opposed every sort of scientific advance. When we have abolished all pain and deformity of the babes, then we can begin to worry about the rats and guinea pigs. COMMON SENSE.

An Eight-Hour Week.
To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

MR. HARDING seems to be enjoying the presidency. Ever since he reached the White House life has been one vacation after another. Far be it from me to be captious, but it does seem as if a President at this time could put in a few days on the job now and then. A lot of us, to be sure, have nothing to do, but the President can hardly consider himself as belonging to us idle poor.

I want to be reasonable about this. I don't believe Mr. Harding should have to work eight hours a day, but might he not try an eight-hour week?

LAISSEZ FAIRE.

The Fat Old Lothario.
To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

SINCE criticism like time seems to move in cycles, let's give the poor girls who insist on "rolling 'em down and wearing 'em short and bobbing their hair," a well-earned rest, and start another anvil chorus. Suppose we talk about the pest whom, like the poor, we have always with us—the elderly male flirt. The one whose hair—what there is of it—is usually redolent of "Glovers;" whose too-carefully manicured finger carries a diamond a shade too large for good taste; whose palm-beach suited figure is always two shades too fat to be anything but gross looking; and who, when you give him 55 per cent of the street car seat, insists on sitting even closer.

They present a problem to the average girl—the casual touching of knee and foot and elbow is always "accidental" when carried to the extreme that she must resent it by word or look. And his apologies are profuse—but he keeps right on talking in his easy, too-pleasant, oily way—he only wanted a chance to start a conversation, anyhow. His words are kind, but his eyes say the things that his lips dare not, and by the time her corner is reached the girl is glad to escape to the fresh outer air.

Sometimes I wonder if they know the real nature of the emotions they arouse in the average girl—these frazzled ends of misspent lives. Usually only disgust, repulsion and scorn. But the other morning I added pity to this list as I catalogued the advances of a man, who, if he wasn't should have been a respected grandfather. I pitied him for the wasted years and ideals that all too clearly lay behind him and felt a deep compassion that he had allowed himself to be so coarsened by life that he could no longer distinguish between the false and the true. ANOTHER WOMAN.

Where Are They?
To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

WHERE can a fellow find one of those old-fashioned home girls that make such swell pies? LONELY.

A Jaybird's Luck.
To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

A PERFECT exhibition of jay driving was given at Twelfth and Olive a couple of days ago. Mr. Jaybird, in a big, ponderous, expensive roadster, driving north on Twelfth, refused to pause simply because east and west bound Olive street cars were crossing Twelfth. He drove on. He had to swing sharply to the right to avoid the eastbound car, and meantime the westbound car was all but on him. Had the motorman been less alert that roadster would have been spread along the spacious pavement, and, incidentally, the Jaybird, too. But nothing happened. The Jaybird escaped, to continue sweeping along to whatever Damphoolia engages him, while the present observer could only upbraid the luck of boobs. SOVIETSKI.

NO TIME TO LIE DOWN.

The Attorney-General is weakening in his quest of prosecution of the guilty in connection with the Lincoln Institute land deal whereby the State was defrauded of the difference between $27,000, which was the price paid for the land, and $10,000, which, according to Gov. Hyde's own statement, was as much as the land was worth. The Attorney-General wants evidence, and he states that he and the Governor had agreed, "as lawyers," that the known facts were insufficient to institute suit either to recover the money or to set aside the purchase.

Getting down to brass tacks, the exorbitant price received for this land by the former owners, as well as the $9000 commission pocketed by a Jefferson City banker, is not the real issue at stake in this affair. Any property owner or business man dealing with the State is going to get all he can. It is not for the State to regulate those who do business with it, unless they are guilty of fraud. But it is the duty of the State and its administration to find who is boring from within and by what peculiar process of magic $27,000 can find its way out of the State Treasury without value received and in violation of a plain provision of law requiring the Governor's indorsement.

Attorney-General Barrett is shy of evidence, and yet it has already been published as established fact brought out by the legislative investigation that Thomas Speed Mosby, while president of the Board of Regents of Lincoln Institute, which voted the purchase, had secured an option on the property prior to its purchase through Howard Cook, the $9000 agent. It also has been published as an established fact that the warrant for the purchase of the land was taken from the Auditor's office without the release of either the Governor or the State Auditor himself, as required by law.

If the Governor and Attorney-General are to lie down before a situation like this, what protection of the funds of the State remains to be relied upon?

That report that the county is to be cleaned up may be only dry humor.

With those who try to check her progress the Missouri of 1921 makes no compromise.

JUSTICE DELAYED.

The lower house of Congress should immediately pass the bill which has already passed the Senate, providing for the payment of $66 a month, for life, to Arthur E. Rump, a St. Louis postal clerk who was terribly crippled through the carelessness of a fellow employe, and whose invincible optimism in the face of his misfortune has long been the marvel of those familiar with the case.

No better illustration of the ingratitude of republics has, perhaps, ever occurred. It was in 1902 that his injury was sustained. Since that time, the sole aid given him by the Government consisted of a grant of $2000—a grotesquely inadequate sum in the face of his injury, which has resulted in the paralysis of almost every muscle of his body. This Spartan sufferer has supported himself by soliciting magazine subscriptions over the telephone from his bedside, since the death of his wife, who collapsed under the strain of caring for and supporting him.

The compensation provided in the bill is little enough, and it has been tragically delayed in coming. The delay should not be further prolonged.

Those registering at our police hostelries will no longer be required to pay a 50-cent cover charge.

Speaking of the show places of Missouri, what's the matter with Sedalia?

A HUMANITARIAN PROBLEM.

Mrs. Marguerite Harrison's dispatch, printed in Tuesday's Post-Dispatch, should have the effect of clearing somewhat the clouded situation that faces Americans in the matter of giving relief to the famine sufferers. Such help, she says, will have no political effect whatever, in so far as the present Government is concerned. It will neither hasten nor delay the fall of the Communist regime. She adds that there is not, for the present, the slightest likelihood that the present Government will be overturned. Her opinion carries some weight. She is a trained observer, and, having just been released from the bolsheviks' prison, is hardly likely to distort truth in their favor.

Our problem, then, is the simple humanitarian one of helping the helpless. Hunger knows neither tongue nor race nor flag. Its palliative should be equally catholic. In the face of a situation into which the political element does not enter, we can aid the hungry and freezing of Russia as we have aided those of France, Germany, Poland and, in fact, of a majority of the countries of the earth.

If Ambassador Francis could have remobilized the Jefferson Guards of World's Fair fame the story in Russia might have been different.

ST. LOUIS UNFAIRLY RATED.

There are two classes of people in St. Louis who should support Secretary-Manager Smith of the Mississippi Valley Division of the National Safety Council in his efforts to procure a reduction in the St. Louis rate on automobile liability insurance. One class is composed of automobile owners and the other is composed of everybody else.

For it is not a mere matter of enabling automobile owners to get cheaper liability insurance, nor even a mere matter of common justice to them. It is a matter of fairness to St. Louis. The success of the effort will mean not only the reduction of rates, but the restoration of St. Louis to its rightful place as the safest city in the United States in which to live, population considered.

Figures compiled by Mr. Smith show that St. Louis has fewer accidents than any other city in the United States, in proportion to its population. But it is classified, for rating purposes, with Chicago and Pittsburg, where the hazards of traffic, as a matter of common knowledge and as shown by the figures, are much greater.

The injustice to automobile owners is serious enough, since it compels them to pay for a greater risk than the insurance companies incur, at a cost to them of $150,000 to $200,000 per year in excess of what they should pay; but the injustice to St. Louis is greater, in that it deprives the city of the advantage to which it is entitled as a place of safe residence.

A low percentage of accidents in a city is not merely a happy condition. It is an achievement. It is the result of effort. The city is entitled to the reward, in reputation, for the results of its efforts. A high liability rating deprives it of that reward. So people who ride in street cars and people who walk should help to have the liability rating reduced. It is a city affair.

Where are the Game Wardens? The Capper-Tincher bill would exterminate all the bulls and bears at one fell swoop.

Sedalia no longer has a Bazoo to read, but it has one to blow.

HISTORICAL ECHOES IN THE NEWS.

There was something of a shock in the news from London the other day that Runnymede was to be sold under the hammer. A venerable member of the House of Lords, a lineal descendant of one of the Barons who fought it out with King John, protested against the sacrilege, but Britons generally do not appear to have shared his lordship's indignation. The site of Magna Charta may be the holiest spot in secular history, but England, apparently, looks unmoved on the Government's proposal to sell it.

A different bit of news came from Berlin a few days earlier—the solemn memorial, in dim, old, mystic rites, to Barbarossa, who sleeps, according to legend, in the Thuringian Mountains, which his spirit still haunts. Like Runnymede, Barbarossa is a bequest of that "astounding thirteenth century" which also gave us Dante, Thomas Aquinas, Francis, Dominic. History associates no vision of liberty with Barbarossa; it estimates him, rather, as the embodiment of that superman of whom Nietzsche later was to dream. But a Celtic historian has had the grace and facility to observe that "Barbarossa died an Aryan death in the field against the Mohammedan."

The thirteenth century is far away and ancestor worship is an Oriental religion; nevertheless, the Teuton remembering Barbarossa is a happier figure than is the Saxon forgetting Runnymede.

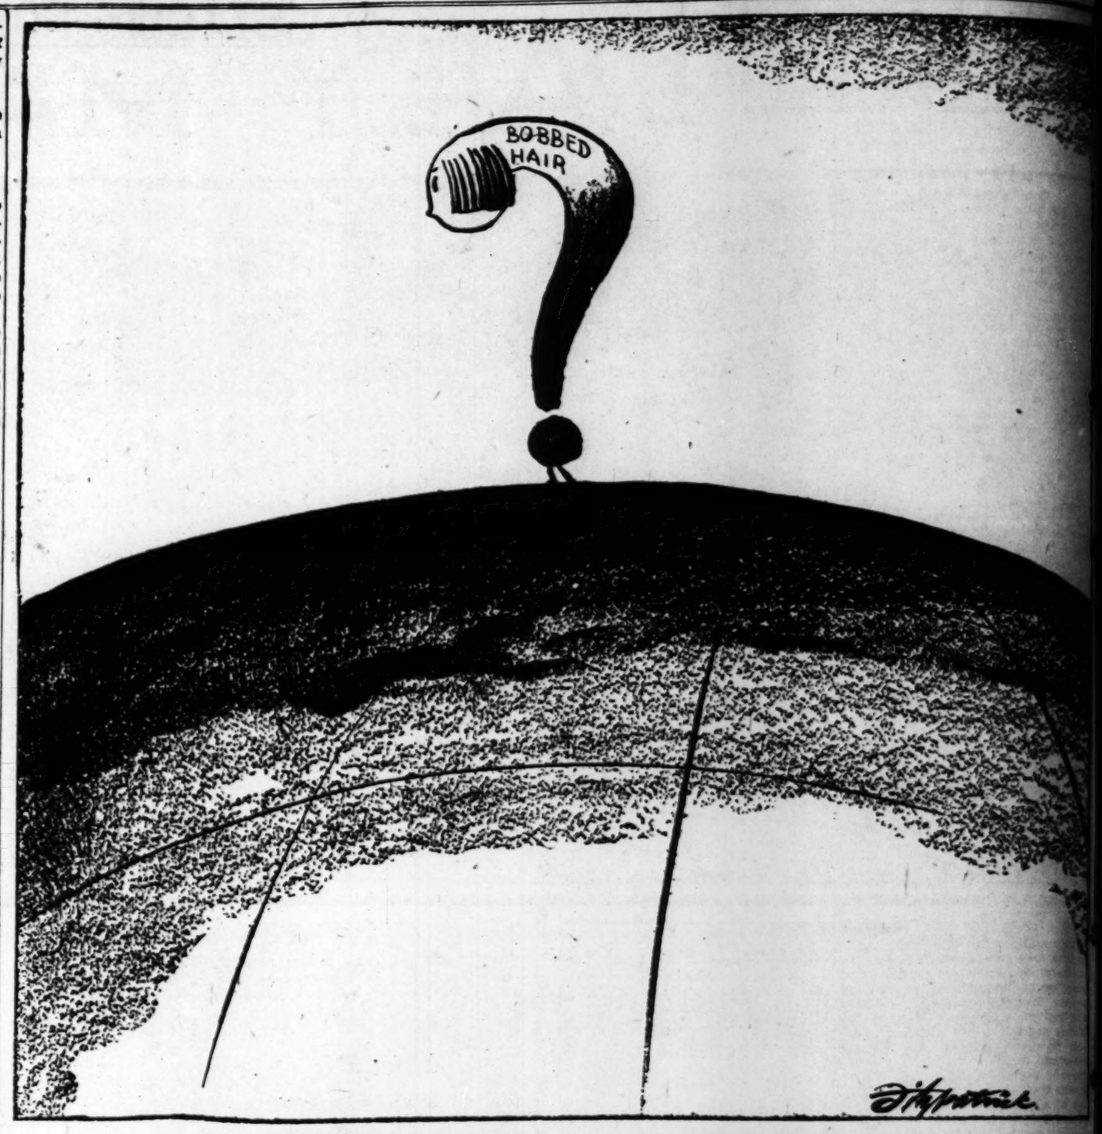

Missouri's long, hard fight for admission as a State ended in success, but it did not end her long, hard fights.

The Salvation Army has the right idea. Show the boys and girls a farm now and they may want to go back to it when they grow up.

All records for devouring the news were broken by the polar bear in whose stomach the Amundsen expedition found a Norwegian newspaper.

IT OUGHT NOT TO BE HARD TO FIGURE OUT WHERE TO BEGIN RETRENCHING.

SUMMER VAUDEVILLE ON THE WORLD STAGE.

A BOARDWALK INSPIRATION.

MOVED onward by an unseen force,
The Muse runs lightly on its course,
And here beside the rolling ocean
The theme is poetry of motion.

With supple ease it moves apace,
A willowy form of swanlike grace,
To the measured tread and rhythmic beat
Of a wonderful pair of tripping feet.

E'en as I tune my silver lute,
Instant it holps me, spellbound, mute,
Leading me on in the surging sea
Of pleasure-bent humanity.

Go harp, ye bards, of Love's young kiss
And string your lays to heavenly bliss;
Sing ye of skies, of stars, the moon,
September morn and nights in June.

Sing ye of birds, of bees and flowers,
Of trellised walls and fragrant bowers;
Of sighing trees and babbling brooks,
Of rose-lined paths to shady nooks.

Tune on your lyres, your chants of love,
Your odes to Bacchus and to Jove;
My Muse dwells not in scented bower,
But thrives on "eighty cents per hour."

No gilded harp or ancient lyre
Could such a wondrous Muse inspire;
That which moves me thus to dare
Is just a comfy rolling chair.

Sir: Most of us realize the crying need for education the world over. And most of us admit that the average man's mind is a "great uncharted wilderness," therefore, let us have more and better education.

But some of us object to the flippant way in which some fireside critics dub whole classes and peoples "ignorant" and uneducated."

Prof. Andrews of Cornell takes as an illustration of his point a youngster from the East End of London—from Soho or Whitechapel, I suspect. This is equivalent to taking a child from the worst part of the Bowery, New York City, to serve as an example of low standard of education among good people of New York City. It is ridiculous.

Again, the Cockney does not invariably transpose his aspirates. Occasionally a humble "h" does get loose and goes running wild through the poor Cockney's vocabulary, but not often.

I am confident the honorable professor never heard the "Helk and the Helephant" poem rendered as quoted Aug. 3. He has appropriated it from some comic weekly. I spent a number of years in London, and during my stay I found very few aspirates running wild without collar or muzzle.

Granted that the Cockney accent is peculiar, as the New Yorker's accent is peculiar—what then?

Does a peculiarity of accent constitute abysmal ignorance? And who shall say that the affected, drawling accent of an effete aristocracy is to be preferred to, or is more correct than, the lilting cadence of language as spoken by "common" people.

I have talked with innumerable Londoners—Cockneys if you like—men of education and intelligence, whose accent was so thick you could cut it with a knife.

In determining the extent of a people's education, let us not use accent as a criterion.

The MIRROR of PUBLIC OPINION

This column is designed to reproduce without bias the latest comment by the leading publications, newspapers and periodicals on the questions of the day.

THE CIVIL SERVICE.
From the Washington Post.

THE United States Chamber of Commerce with a membership composed of 700,000 firms and individuals, has registered 90 per cent in favor of the proposed reclassification of the service employes for the Government. The reforms which are favored by the members of the national chamber include the following: Reducing of the policy of employment; adequate wages; uniform pay under like conditions; reclassification to be installed by budget bureau; promotion on the preferred method for filling vacancies; civil service to apply to all officers not responsible for determining policies; improvement in the rules governing separations from the service. The common sense business brains of the United States have now passed upon the problems which were considered by the Committee on Reclassification. The solution suggested by that committee has been overwhelmingly approved. The disease that afflicts the governmental service has been well diagnosed and the remedy prescribed. It is now up to Congress to apply the remedy without undue delay.

THE ALLIED DEBTS.
From the Nation.

OF course, everything depends upon the way the conference is handled. If President Harding's representatives play their cards badly; if the Root type of mind prevails; if we once more bring down to Great Britain, the disarmament mountain will give birth to a mouse. Yet even mice have their uses, as a certain lion once discovered, and mice as object lessons are not without value. As matters stand, however, we have nearly all the cards in our hands, and how many tricks we shall take will depend entirely upon our players. Senator Borah does well to point out that the American taxpayer is deeply involved in what happens abroad, because our waiving our interest on the allied debts to us is making it possible for France to be today a far more thoroughly militarized nation than Germany ever was, even in 1914; that England can keep up her far-flung battle line of 350,000 red soldiers is largely due to our generosity. We have heard much these last two weeks as to the question of the allied debts to us. We think nothing has been done or promised, or will be, that will keep us from using those debts for the advancement of humanity. We should lose not one moment in saying to the allies that our people decline longer to finance the armament madness of Europe which today is responsible for more than 3,000,000 of men withdrawn from gainful pursuits and idling in the calling of war. This is an intolerable state of affairs for a sane world.

BILL OF RIGHTS IN CONGRESS.
From the New York World.

THE Senate broke away from the drag-chains of the Anti-Saloon League yesterday long enough to assert in terms of criminal law the supreme authority of the Federal bill of rights in protection of citizens against the enforcement agents of prohibition. Then it dropped back into its now accustomed place of servitude and adopted the league's antibeer-prescription bill by a vote of two to one in flat defiance of the eighteenth amendment, which is aimed at intoxicating liquors for beverage purposes and says not a word against their use for medicinal purposes.

But something has been gained for the liberties of the American citizen by this action. If Congress must arrogate to itself even unconstitutionally the functions and privileges of the physician respecting the use of alcoholic stimulants in the science of healing, it is agreeable to know that it intends to respect other constitutional provisions in protection of the persons and homes of citizens from lawless searches and seizures.

THE WEEKLY HEALTH TALK

Health Commissioner of St. Louis

Contagious Diseases.

THE season is now approachi when the contagious disea will again become prevalent a this article is written for the p pose of soliciting the assistance a co-operation of parents and gua dians of children, among whom th diseases most frequently occur, their prevention.

In the prevention of these disea it is most important to always k in mind the fact that it is the m contagion case that is most dang ous to others for the reason t either is not recognized by the p ent, or, because it is so mild, fact that it is just as contagious the severe case is not appreciated

It is not to be expected that parent will at all times be able recognize contagion, but when a ch has a mild sore throat, or a sli rash, or any other indisposition t might be contagious, it is surely too much to expect of a parent t the true nature of the ailment be certained before allowing the ch to mingle with others. So far as recognized mild case is concerned should be borne in mind that s cases are just as contagious as severest case and from such n cases the most severe case often sult in the exposed.

The fact that one child suffer from a contagious case is capabl conveying it to any other child comes in contact with it logically quires the complete isolation of infected child until its complete covery, if the spread of the dis is to be prevented, and no one so well see to this as the person has the supervision of the child, g erally the parent.

Even in cases that are reported this department, and where premises are properly placar spread of contagion cannot be timely prevented, for there are alw some people who are apparen looking for an opportunity to exh foolhardiness, and children of ten years cannot be expected to exer proper discretion in such mat and will go in to visit in such pl if they are allowed to do so. A ent, however, can safeguard cases and can see that other per are not exposed, and this is by means their duty. If you are the ent of a child and that child ha contagion, remember that in all ing others to be exposed you menacing their lives and if such exposed person contracts the dis and should die you are respons for that death, and this applies any contagion. Some people th that to allow a child to be exp to measles is a trifling matter, yet more children die from com cations incident to measles than of scarlet fever, and no doubt person who allows the measles posure would not allow an expo to scarlet fever.

When your child, especially if s a school child, has an illness has any of the features of a tagion, whether it be a sore th or a rash, do not take chances, physician, and do not by any me or for any reason, allow a child is known to have a contagio come in contact with other chil until the child has been offic certified as being free from the ease.

THE WEEKLY HEALTH TALK

By DR. MAX C. STARKLOFF, Health Commissioner of St. Louis.

Contagious Diseases.

THE season is now approaching when the contagious diseases will again become prevalent and this article is written for the purpose of soliciting the assistance and co-operation of parents and guardians of children, among whom these diseases most frequently occur, in their prevention.

In the prevention of these diseases it is most important to always keep in mind the fact that it is the mild contagion case that is most dangerous to others for the reason that either is not recognized by the parent, or, because it is so mild, the fact that it is just as contagious as the severe case is not appreciated.

It is not to be expected that the parent will at all times be able to recognize contagion, but when a child has a mild sore throat, or a slight rash, or any other indisposition that might be contagious, it is surely not too much to expect of a parent that the true nature of the ailment be ascertained before allowing the child to mingle with others. So far as the unrecognized mild case is concerned, it should be borne in mind that such cases are just as contagious as the severest case and from such mild cases the most severe case often result in the exposed.

The fact that one child suffering from a contagious case is capable of conveying it to any other child who comes in contact with it logically requires the complete isolation of the infected child until its complete recovery, if the spread of the disease is to be prevented, and no one can so well see to this as the person who has the supervision of the child, generally the parent.

Even in cases that are reported to this department, and where the premises are properly placarded, spread of contagion cannot be entirely prevented, for there are always some people who are apparently looking for an opportunity to exhibit foolhardiness, and children of tender years cannot be expected to exercise proper discretion in such matters and will go in to visit in such places if they are allowed to do so. A parent, however, can safeguard such cases and can see that other persons are not exposed, and this is by all means their duty. If you are the parent of a child and that child has a contagion, remember that in allowing others to be exposed you are menacing their lives and if such an exposed person contracts the disease and should die you are responsible for that death, and this applies to any contagion. Some people think that to allow a child to be exposed to measles is a trifling matter, and yet more children die from complications incident to measles than die of scarlet fever, and no doubt the person who allows the measles exposure would not allow an exposure to scarlet fever.

When your child, especially if it be a school child, has an illness that has any of the features of a contagion, whether it be a sore throat or a rash, do not take chances, call a physician, and do not by any means, or for any reason, allow a child that is known to have a contagion to come in contact with other children until the child has been officially certified as being free from the disease.

The schoolroom, picture show, Sunday school and like places largely frequented by children are of course mediums through which such diseases are most often disseminated, and when an outbreak of any disease occurs it is well to keep the children away from any such place that they are not of necessity forced to attend.

Give us your co-operation in this matter and help us to protect the lives of the children.

MOTHERS' HELPS

IF you have no thermometer, test the water for baby's bath with your elbow. To test food pour a little over the wrist. It should feel lukewarm.

When baby vomits, do not attribute it to teething or overfeeding and let it go at that. If vomiting is habitual, it is probably due to wrong feeding and the error should be remedied without delay. Sometimes vomiting is caused by a tight abdominal band. Overfeeding, rapid feeding or too frequent feeding may cause vomiting. Playing with a child soon after feeding will also cause it. When milk is impure or improperly prepared, vomiting may result. When vomiting occurs look for one of these causes and rectify it. But always remember that vomiting is often the first symptom of illness and when a child who has usually been in good health suddenly vomits, there is a reason for it and it should not be neglected.

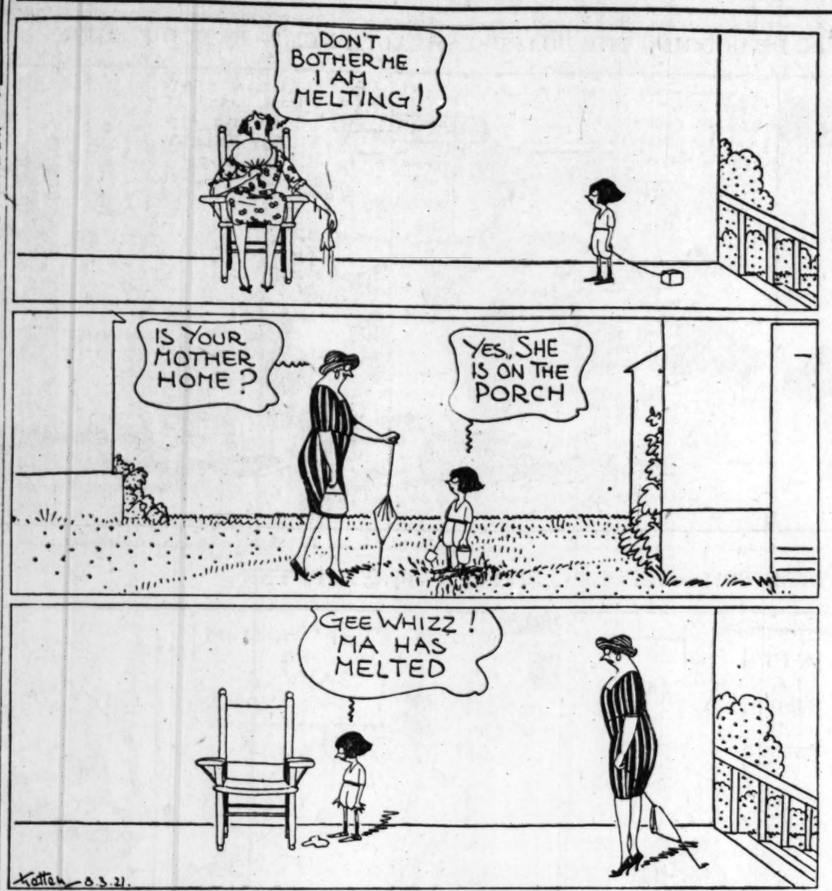

Never give a child candy, chocolate or sweet cake. It only means overwork for the digestive organs and creates an antipathy toward the essential nourishing foods.

A child under one year old should not have solid foods, especially not during the summer, and after the first birthday has been passed solid foods should be given only sparingly for a few months.

PRICES AND THE MODERN GIRL

This is the third of a series of articles by the author being published on this page of the Post-Dispatch each Saturday.

By ARNOLD BENNETT

(Copyright, 1921).

WHEN people say "the shops," they don't mean butcher's shops or bread shops. They mean the shops in which women's attire is the sole or the leading merchandise. And when they say "the sales," they mean chiefly bargains in women's attire.

The shops count among the greatest attractions of London and the provincial cities. They draw to their windows enormously larger crowds than Westminster Abbey or the National Gallery. There are half a dozen spots in the West End where the spectacle of shop windows full of frocks, hats and lingerie results in blocked pavements for several hours every day.

No other kind of wares will regularly block pavements. And let it be admitted that no other kind of wares are so pretty and so agreeable to look at, and therefore so worthy to block pavements. The richly variegated windows of a big shop, just illuminated at twilight, with the dark upper stories setting off their brightness and the hypnotized crowds passing slowly in front of them, make a show that for truly romantic beauty cannot be beaten in London; and I will back it against any sunset seen from Westminster Bridge. Further, sunsets are not improving in elegance and shop fronts are.

And not in the main thoroughfares alone is women's attire the paramount display and lure. A similar phenomenon is to be observed in the newspapers. You might turn over the pages of a daily and miss the political reports—you could not possibly miss the women's attire. For, quite apart from the immense and comprehensive illustrated advertisements of it, now infinitely more imposing and delightful than in the past, women's attire is treated every day in most papers as a special item of the day's news, with the aid of original designs and photographs. Often it is the only illustrated news in the paper.

Cricket may shrink, even racing may wither in a drouth, but the journalistic importance of women's attire never abates. Newspapers have realized what women's attire has come to mean to the community; but I doubt whether the community itself has yet consciously realized to what a tremendous extent this dazzling subject has captured the general imagination.

Any sensational preacher who lacks a topic for his fulminations can find it, and often does find it, in women's "finery;" any layman who happens for private reasons to be out of love with the sex will try to revenge himself by scarifying woman's peculiar folly as demonstrated by the pursuit of fashions; and not for generations have women been more fiercely attacked on account of their clothes than during the last three years.

According to the attackers, social and religious, the matter is perfectly simple:

Women as a sex are foolish about their clothes, and that is the beginning and the end of it. But I doubt if the matter is so simple.

Which Is Worse.

FOR example, no man has yet shown that women are more foolish than men in the affair of clothes. Men are slaves to fashion; they allow themselves no latitude. And when they do escape from some unusually fatuous convention they do what they can to get back to prison; as witness the present grand masculine effort to restore the top hat to its ancient tyranny.

Nor are men any more practical than women in their clothes. A human being who will wear black or dark clothes in hot weather would commit any folly.

Consider the male waistcoat, which is thinnest in exactly the region where it covers the most sensitive part of the body—the spine!

Consider the starched shirt. No, better not consider it! There are objects too shocking, too barbarous, too grotesque, for the consideration of nice-minded persons.

As for the relative extravagance of the two sexes in clothes, I am not convinced that the wife's cost on the average more than the husband's. The husband knows as a rule what the wife spends, but unless he is a lunatic he does not disclose to her what he spends. A clever woman would conjure half a dozen evening frocks out of the price of her husband's dress suit.

One of my friends, a misguided statistician, proved to me the other day that every time I don evening dress I dissipate 10 shillings. And anyway women array themselves to please men and because men positively want them to be arrayed and would be vexed if they were not arrayed.

The attitude of men toward's women's clothes is perhaps the grossest possible example of hypocrisy, confused thinking, cheap sneering, and downright meanness that the history of the human race can show.

Fashion a Benefit.

TO understand clothes it is necessary to grasp two fundamental truths.

The first is that fashion is not an evil but a good. Fashion is an expression of convention, and conventions are the cement of society, or, to express it otherwise, the essential antidote of anarchy and the main support of order. Fashions exist everywhere in everything. There are fashions in religious belief, in doctors' prescriptions, in charities; and if there were no fashions in costume the resulting mess would be considerable.

Fashions are not confined to highly civilized communities. They are strongest in primitive communities. Take a small island in the Solomon group. It is about a mile across. A line divides it into two parts and into two fashions of attire. On one side of the line the women dress unpractically but decently; on the other they dress practically (with pockets) but indecently.

The second truth to be grasped is that dress is not wholly or chiefly a matter of protection and of decency. The purposes of customs are, and always have been, various. Among them are the desire to attract the opposite sex, to hide blemishes, to disclose or heighten beauties. All which purposes are surely legitimate. And as for ornament, the origin of much personal ornament is magical, religious or medicinal—and some personal ornament still is magical in its intention, seeing that both men and women still wear things "for luck."

Of course it cannot be denied that some women dress principally for display, in order to prove how rich they are or how rich their husbands are. This may be vulgar, but it is not vicious, and if such women dress artistically, as now and then they do, they go far to justify themselves; for if luxury contrives to be artistic it fulfills a proper and important function in the commonwealth. How important the function is you may realize by conceiving the commonwealth without any luxury at all. Luxury meets a universal desire; but it is relative.

Everybody wants some luxury, and nearly everybody gets some luxury. The only luxuries that people cavil at are the luxuries which do not happen to appeal to their tastes or which they cannot personally afford to pay for. Each of us looks at the existence of such luxuries as a sign of decadence. Humanity is very funny.

A Weak Theory.

IT is notorious that a marked change has come over the feminine costume. Modern frocks have been attacked as vulgar, insufficient, shameless; and they are supposed to be an illustration of that "loosening of the bonds" which accompanies a great war.

The favorite theory is that in the war women grew hysterical. Tens of thousands of them left their homes for a new freedom, and incidentally enjoyed the disposal of far more money than ever they had before.

The feeling of independence, coupled with the sense of the possibility of the break-up of civilization, was too much for them. Rules of conduct went to smash. Morals were forgotten. Desire ran riot. Modesty expired. Nothing mattered. And the expression of the feminine state of mind was seen in the fashions.

An interesting, even an exciting, theory, delightfully simple; but it should be received with caution.

In the first place, the new fashions were beginning before the war; they had certainly begun before women stepped into the new freedom, and before the fear of universal disaster had developed.

And in the second place, the new fashions came from France, where women, before British women, had suffered bereavement on a great scale, and where there was no new freedom or independence to make them hysterical or vicious or careless.

In fact, the common theory, if it explains the new fashions at all, does so only in an extremely slight degree, and the true, full explanation when it is worked out will probably be very much more complicated and very much less theatrical.

We are not likely to find the true, full explanation in our time; meanwhile, let us—especially those of us who are men or old women—be chary in our accusing.

When you have settled in your own mind upon a theory which accounts for the alleged immodesty, indecency, suggestiveness or whatever you like to call the quality, of the modern frock, the question remains:

"Is the modern frock immodest, etc., etc.?"

Some women would manage to be immodest or suggestive, no matter what the fashions might be. But such women in all ages are exceptional, and must be omitted from a general estimate of the situation. These exceptions, apart, I do not think that a charge against the morality of the modern frock can be sustained.

Assuredly skirts are short, but they have not yet risen to the knees; and, after all, what is reprehensible in the short skirt? It is more hygienic; it is more comfortable; it gives greater freedom to those contrivances upon which women walk; it enables women even to run with the said contrivances. And undoubtedly women revel in the new physical freedom.

I have an idea that the mentality which regrets the long skirts is the same mentality which in China insisted on rendering women's feet quite useless for ambulatory purposes. Are short skirts suggestive? I should say that they are the very opposite to suggestive.

The other day in a West End street I saw a young woman in an uncompromisingly long skirt. Well, it shocked me. I thought:

"This young woman must be a peculiar and perverse young woman. I wonder what is the matter with her?"

There came into my mind the celebrated lines of Sir John Suckling:

Her feet beneath her petticoat
Like little mice stole in and out,
As if they feared the light.

And the lines positively struck me as perverse and suggestive. Why should little feet have to peep in and out, and why should they behave themselves as if they feared the light? I consider that the new fashions have done well to take us beyond the peeping stage and the coy stage and the falsely prim stage. And I should like to have been able to say to the young woman:

"Please go home at once and dress yourself decently."

Victorian Fashions.

AS regards the upper portions of the modern frock, it may for a period have descended too far, but in essentials it never, at its most audacious, went beyond the point demanded by Queen Victoria at her dinner parties. It is on record that young women guests sometimes had to have their evening dress hastily altered within the royal dwelling because the admirable Victoria, beloved by the bourgeoisie, would not tolerate underexposure of the female body at dinner or after dinner!

Probably she hated suggestiveness. If she did she would doubtless have objected to the modern knitted, high-necked tight jumper worn without a corset; and yet I have never heard the critics of modern costumes utter a word against the tight jumper. Nor have I heard them assert that the modern costume is ungraceful or ugly. The fact—and the most important fact of all—is that women have not been so becomingly and beautifully dressed for ages as they are today.

Naturally all the professional Jeremiahs and Habbakuks, if silenced on their accusation of immodesty or insufficiency in the modern frock, will fasten on to "the exaggerated interest" which women, and especially girls, now show in dress, and will charge the sex not only with monetary extravagance in clothes, but also with devoting a great deal too much time to clothes. I have already referred to the question of expense.

Of one thing I am certain, namely that if the average modern girl spends too much on her frocks, her predecessor of the last generation did not spend enough—was not, indeed, allowed to spend enough.

Even today I am inclined to think the average married woman is somewhat pinched in her dress allowance, so that her career as a wearer of nice frocks is simply one long series of tricks, devices dyeings, modifications and bargain hunting.

In any case I have not the slightest fear of the modern woman ruining herself or her family by dressing herself too well. That profound spirit of moderation which characterizes the Anglo-Saxon race and which again and again brings the country safely through enormous crises that in other countries would result in revolution—that same spirit is always at work in the modern woman, even when she finds herself among a surging crowd of hypnotised and feverish companions in one of those magical palaces which we call shops.

Dressing as an Art.

AGAIN, as regards the amount of attention and time bestowed on clothes, I am quite certain that if the modern girl bestows too much of these precious commodities on adornment, her predecessor did not spend enough. A girl can make herself decent and keep herself warm by a quarter of an hour's attention per day to the task. But to dress well is an art, and an extremely complicated and difficult art; and the less money you have available for the purpose the more complicated and difficult it becomes.

It comprises all manner of problems connected with the hair, the complexion, the hands, the feet, the jewelry, and heaven knows what else. And above everything it comprises the expression of the individuality. If a woman's attire does not express and enhance her individuality then it is a failure.

And to express one's individuality by means of textiles at the same time keeping within the fashions is an affair whose delicacy can be guessed at by any man who has ever chosen a necktie "to suit him." I wish that woman could see a man hesitate between 40 neckties in a hosier's shop. The sight would furnish her with effective retorts when she was next attacked about her gewgaws.

I have called woman's dressing an art. To my mind it is the most influential of all the arts, and is capable of giving more pleasure to the community at large than all the other arts combined. It has professors worthy to rank with the foremost painters, musicians, poets and architects. Tens of thousands of girls herd themselves into vast institutions in order to learn how to sing or play. In 90 per cent of the cases it ends in a concert or a picture and the amiable applause of friends. Perhaps in one case out of a thousand is real talent, capable of giving real general pleasure produced. Yet these same exponents will call themselves serious persons and despise a girl who devotes herself with similar passion to her appearance. But a well-dressed woman is giving pleasure all the time; she is exercising a civilizing and a human influence all the time.

Her influence doesn't begin at 8:15 and last for an hour and a half on stage. Nor is it necessary to go to the Royal Academy to see what she has accomplished. Her show is a continuous performance. It is private and it is also public. Everybody who witnesses it is, consciously or unconsciously, uplifted by it.

It is the finest and most powerful application of the poetic principle to daily ordinary life. In a word, every well-dressed woman is a public benefactor. You may call her all the bad names you like, but she is a public benefactor.

UNCOMMON SENSE

By John Blake

Ill Temper.

IF YOUR temper is ill, cure it. While it is being cured, keep it indoors, like any other case of illness.

If you are accustomed to fly into a violent fit of rage in public, carefully note the exhibition made by some other man who has the same failing.

Watch him for a few minutes and then decide if you want to make the same kind of a spectacle of yourself.

Ill temper is not only unnecessary, but actually hurtful to the man who possesses it.

Violent anger breeds poisons in the system. It ruins digestion and may, if persisted in, lead to apoplexy.

RECENTLY the writer saw an important looking fat man miss a shot on a golf course through his own clumsiness.

The man immediately flew into a rage and blamed his caddy, who was standing beside him, for his blundering stroke.

When the caddy quietly insisted that he was not responsible the man ordered him back to the caddy house and later came in to demand his dismissal.

Fortunately for the man a friend so ridiculed his action that he withdrew the demand, and today he blames himself for his mistakes.

Only those who give way to anger do such spectacularly foolish things as this.

They are infuriated first at their own stupidity, and then fearing that someone else will laugh at their awkwardness, vent their rage at all who are about them.

They get what they deserve, which is the contempt or ridicule of all who see them.

ILL TEMPER is well named, for the temper that is ill is suffering from a dangerous malady—a malady which destroys the judgment and weakens the intellect.

Avoid exhibitions of temper as you would avoid smallpox. If you can't cure your temper in a few days give it a long and protracted treatment, But keep it in the privacy of your home pending recovery.

It is not a pleasant thing to show to your friends, and it does not gain you anything but derision, which is not in the least enviable.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORIES

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

A Queer Friendship.

Friendship, stanch through every test,
Of all that life can give is best.
—Farmer Brown's Boy.

"YOU never can tame a Heron," said Farmer Brown as he peeped in at the little room in which the young Heron was a prisoner.

Farmer Brown's boy smiled. "Wait until I have fed him a few times and perhaps you will change your mind," said he. "I started fishing this morning because I wanted to go fishing. Now I guess I'll have to go fishing. I have an idea it will take a lot of fish to satisfy that fellow's appetite. I don't know of anything to feed him but fish and frogs."

So once more Farmer Brown's boy went whistling across the green meadow. He found his fish-rod where he had left it when he went over to the swamp to find out what Sammy Jay had been making such a fuss about. Then he went on to the Smiling Pool and began to fish. But instead of trying to catch big fish he now fished only for little ones. For the first time in his life he wasn't interested in big fish. He wanted little ones and plenty of them. So he put on a very small hook and fished for minnows and little perch. You see he wasn't fishing for himself, but for that young Heron back in the barn.

When he had caught a dozen he wound up his line and started for home. As he stepped into the little room where the Heron was the long-legged bird stared at him with suspicion and as he stepped forward drew back his neck as if to strike. Farmer Brown's boy spoke softly. Then he tossed one of the little fish down in front of the Heron. For a long time the Heron refused to touch it. Farmer Brown's boy was patient. Finally hunger was too much for the young Heron; he picked up the little fish and swallowed it head first at one gulp. Then he blinked at Farmer Brown's boy and the latter tossed another fish to him. There was not so long to wait this time. The third little fish was picked up almost as soon as it touched the floor.

Two days later that young Heron was taking fish from the hand of Farmer Brown's Boy and not grabbing at them either. If Farmer Brown's Boy boy gave them to him tails first he always turned them so that they went down his long throat heads first. And he always swallowed a fish at one gulp. It tickled Farmer Brown's Boy.

"You don't get any pleasure out of eating," said he.

But apparently the young Heron thought otherwise, for he was always ready to gulp down another. Ten fish a day it took to keep him satisfied, so that Farmer Brown's Boy had to go fishing every evening after work. But he didn't mind. He and the young Heron were becoming friends. The big bird would allow him to handle him as he pleased. He never offered to strike with that great bill of his. He would even take the hand of Farmer Brown's

Then he went out to the Smiling Pool and began to fish.

Boy in that great bill and gently shake it. There was no longer fear or wildness in his eyes when Farmer Brown's Boy entered, but instead a strange look of pleasure.

Day by day the poor hurt foot healed and at last it was well. The bandages were removed for good and the young Heron walked as well as ever. Once more Farmer Brown's Boy gathered him up in his arms, but this time no coat was wrapped about him. They were friends and the big bird didn't in the least mind being carried.

Down across the Green Meadow tramped Farmer Brown's Boy to the swamp on the edge of the Big River. At the place where he had found the young Heron fast in the dreadful trap he put him down. Then he fed him three fish and turned back. The young Heron watched him go. Lonesomeness swept over him. He croaked harshly as if to call Farmer Brown's Boy back. But almost at once it was answered by a glad cry, glad despite its harshness, and a great bird dropped down beside him. It was his mother, Mrs. Longlegs. So for a time Farmer Brown's Boy was forgotten.

PACKING THE TRUNK

ONE woman who asserts she never finds her garments wrinkled nor small articles scattered about at the end of a journey places an old sheet in the bottom of her trunk, bringing it up over the sides. When everything is in the trunk she folds the sheet over the top of the clothes and pins it with safety pins.

Lay collars, jabots, etc., flat on the cardboard that is put in men's shirts at the laundry. Snap a few rubber bands on to hold them in place and you will always have fresh neckwear to put on.

Press corks firmly into bottles. Then either tie them down or cover them with paraffine. Wrap bottles in soft towels or garments and pack in middle of trunk.

Put hats in top tray and put two or three good sized pins through the brim to penetrate bottom of tray. Small articles, such as handkerchiefs, can be packed in the crown. Cover hat loosely with tissue paper or light weight garment and pack other articles around the hat until tray is filled.

Skirts should be placed at the bottom of the trunk and, thanks to their shortness, in many cases do not need to be folded. If one has a new three-tray trunk it is advisable to put skirts in the last tray.

BANANA WHIP

WHEN a change is wanted for dessert, try banana whip. Peel some bananas, scrape off the coarse threads and press the pulp through a sieve. Add sugar and lemon juice to taste and cook over the fire, stirring constantly till the mixture boils. Remove from the fire and chill. Beat some cream until it is firm, fold the banana and cream together and put into glasses, sprinkling a few finely chopped nuts over all.

PUDDING SAUCE

ONE cup cugar, 1 egg, 1 cup boiling water, 1 tablespoon flour, ½ cup butter, vanilla.

Mix flour with little cold water, add to boiling water, let cook few minutes, take from stove, add sugar and butter, let cool, and add the beaten yolk of the egg. Beat white of egg stiff, add the other ingredients and heat all for 10 minutes.

TO REMOVE STAINS

MUSTARD.

BOIL the table linen in water in which washing soda has been dissolved in proportion of one teaspoonful soda to one quart water. Boil until all traces of discoloration have disappeared; then rinse thoroughly.

MUD.

Soak the article in kerosene.

PAINT AND VARNISH.

Use either alcohol, turpentine, chloroform or ether. Old paint spots can be removed from clothing by saturating with equal parts of turpentine and spirits of ammonia.

PITCH, TAR, ETC.

Rub with fat, then wash in usual way; or saturate the spot and rub well with turpentine, benzine or gasoline. Soaking the stain in warm milk and salt will remove tar.

SCORCH.

Bleach in sunshine. If this is not efficacious rub on soap, lay in sun and pour over it a thin starch water. If stubborn, use Javelle water. Wetting the scorched spot with clean water and sprinkling borax over this will remove the stain from delicate fabrics.

WHITEWASH.

Use strong vinegar.

WINE.

If stain is fresh rub with salt, let stand a few minutes then rinse in cold water. If old, soak in warm milk.

PERSPIRATION.

Use soap and warm water. If this does not take it out bleach in the sun. It is best to take perspiration stains out as soon as they appear. For unwashable blouses mix one-half teaspoon powdered borax with one cup water. Wet a piece of absorbent cotton in this solution and rub the spot with this. If the stain will not respond to these treatments try alcohol or ether.

STOVE POLISH.

Use cold water and soap or try benzine, kerosene or gasoline.

WATER.

Steam or sponge water spotted fabrics. For books, lay a blotter on each side of the first wet leaf and press with a medium hot iron. Continue this with each leaf until all are dry.

LAMPBLACK OR SOOT.

Use kerosene, chloroform, ether, benzine, gasoline or carbon tetrachloride. All are equally good.

Interesting New Inventions

TO enable persons to see both sides of their faces at once, an inventor has mounted a pair of mirrors on lazy tongs, which separate them as far as a user wishes.

For use at baseball games a Texas inventor has patented a device that can be used as score card, megaphone or fan.

The sections of an Ohio inventor's fishing pole telescope into a walking stick.

To prevent women's hats being blown away while the owners are motoring, clips have been invented to hold them in place.

With an Illinois inventor's device for retail stores small dry vegetables can be poured into receptacles and automatically weighed without handling.

Made of netting, a new canopy to cover sleeping babies can be folded and carried in a case resembling an umbrella.

Two steel wires held together at the ends by pieces of sheet metal form a Virginia inventor's device for holding men's soft hats in shape.

VEAL POT-PIE

COOK in 2 pounds veal neck in boiling water until tender. Trim all meat possible from the bones. Add to white sauce.

White Sauce.

Two tablespoons flour, salt and pepper; two tablespoons melted butter or butter substitute; one and one-half cup milk.

Scald milk, then add the butter and flour which has been made into a paste. Add seasoning.

Make an ordinary biscuit dough and line a baking dish with this. Into the dish pour the meat and white sauce combined, and put a covering of biscuit over the top, being careful that there are small openings in the top for the steam to escape. Bake in a medium oven for 20 minutes. Serve with mashed potatoes and peas.

MORE TRUTH THAN POETRY

THE IMPORTED DRAMA.

Whenever a Petrograd plumber indites
  A drama whose theme is so raw
That it's pinched, when it's run for a couple of nights
  For breaking the soviet law,
The plumber, as soon as he's let out of jail,
  Gets some one to publish his play
And sends it along by the earliest mail
  For production on dear old Broadway
And the first nighter says to his scandalized wife:
"Those Russians: They certainly understand life!"

When Norwegian bricklayers fill up their scenes
  With language divorce courts would bar,
The law, as they well might expect, intervenes
  And tells them they're going too far.
And then, if their shows are unpleasant enough
  They arrange for productions and dates,
And make no dely in dispatching their stuff
  To show to the folks in the states.
And the first nighter cries, in ecstatic delight:
"Those Norwegian geniuses: How they can write!"

When Austrians, Bulgars or Servian cooks
  And waiters and tapsters and maids
Find out that their plays, e'en though printed in books,
  Are apt to be subject to raids.
They have them translated by grocery clerks
  Who've been given a grade school degree
And, when they are typewritten, ship the whole works
  For American high-brows to see.
And the critics exclaim as they see them: "Dear, dear
Why can't we write dramas like these over here!"
